TRAP PUBLIC ENEMY NO. 2

HIS PARENTAGE KEY TO MYSTERY KIDNAP

International News Photograph Service

After a kidnap hunt which had police of seven states looking for him, this $2\frac{1}{2}$-year-old Chicago boy, Donald Horst, was surrendered to authorities today by Mrs. John Regan, who said she was his real mother. She allegedly confessed to having taken him from wealthy Mr. and Mrs. Otto Horst, who insist they are his parents.

Rome, Aug. 4 (US)—Count Galeazzo Ciano in a history-making declaration of Italian foreign policy today had opened wide the door for negotiation of an Anglo-Italian rapprochement to provide a new and vital stabilizing element for the peace of jittery Europe.

Speaking to Britain and to the world, the Italian foreign minister in an official declaration—the first he has made on Anglo-Italian relations—frankly told this correspondent:

"There are no fundamental obstacles or differences barring the way to Anglo-Italian friendship."

He added:

"The road is now clear to permit an examination of the ways and means of restoring the relations between Britain and Italy upon a plane of traditional friendship."

U. S. Finds 25 Tax 'Gift' Cases in State

Reports were dispatched by airplane to Washington today on 25 cases that form part of the special Treasury Department Probe into alleged evasion of income taxes by politicians and contractors' "silent partners."

One of the 15 agents in Special Investigator George A. Lambert's so-called "wrecking crew" carried the reports in person, to be delivered to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

At the same time, reinforced by the five new agents who were sent here from the capital yesterday, Lambert was able to extend his investigation into neighboring states of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont.

CHECK BANK ACCOUNTS

Six of his crew were ordered into those states to check bank accounts and bank vaults in which the men under scrutiny are believed to have "salted down" gift monies received from certain contracting firms engaged in public works projects.

KIDNAP CHILD LINKED TO 'BABY HOAX'

Chicago, Aug. 4—After a kidnaping scare which stirred seven states, the couple who seized 30-month-old Donald Horst today surrendered the child to authorities with a claim that he is their own.

With the parentage of the child in dispute, the amazing climax of the supposed ransom "snatch" came when Mr. and Mrs. John Regan notified the state's attorney's office they had the child.

The dark-eyed youngster was unharmed.

Assistant State's Attorney W. K. Crowley at once had the child and the Regan couple brought to his office, and there the intricate story developed still further amazing angles. These included:

A claim by Mrs. Regan that Donald was born to her out of wedlock, and immediately taken from her.

Insistence by Mr. and Mrs. Otto Horst, supposed parents of the boy, from whom he was snatched last night, that Donald is their own son, and Horst's offer to "submit to any test" to prove this.

A statement by Captain Dan-

8 HELD AFTER BOSTON BAD MONEY TIP

Secret Service agents today seized eight persons as the "brains" of a nation-wide counterfeit ring which included Boston as one of its operating centers and which has circulated more than a million dollars in bad currency.

Agent Rictor D. Carli, one of the cleverest agents of the secret service, was given credit for the arrests after putting "the finger" on the gang in New York city.

Working on information obtained from agents in Massachusetts several weeks ago, Carli posed as a buyer for "queer money," ingratiated himself with heads of the ring and then dealt the telling blow, it was learned.

Four arrests on counterfeiting charges had already been made in this state. Two men were seized at the dog-racing track in Dighton and two more persons in Boston.

Termed head of the national gang of counterfeiters by the Secret Service was Vincenzo Coniglio of New York. He was arrested personally in New York by Captain William A. Houghton of the Secret Service.

A beautiful red-headed girl, who gave her name as Eleanor Poppalardo, but who is believed to be a New England runaway, was ar-

Endeavour Trails by Quarter-Mile in 3d Cup Race

Aboard Coast Guard Cutter Argo, off Newport, R. I., Aug. 4 (AP)—Harold S. Vanderbilt's Ranger, seeking her third straight triumph in defense of the America's Cup, had turned a two-length lead at the start to a margin of over a quarter of a mile at 1:40 p. m. (E. S. T.) today, an hour after the start of her contest with the British challenger, T. O. M. Sopwith's Endeavour II.

Sailing the first 15-mile beat of a 30-mile course to windward and return, the yachts were being pushed along by a breeze that had freshened to a velocity of more than fourteen miles per hour.

Within five miles of the turning mark, set a point about eight miles southeast of Block Island, Ranger's lead remained undiminished and it appeared more and more probable that she would win again and thus

BRITISH GIRL 'STEALS SHOW' FROM YACHTS

Newport, R. I., Aug. 4—Yachtsmen here may be inclined to swagger a bit over Skipper Harold S. Vanderbilt's success in races for the America's cup.

But feminine Newport isn't finding British competition so easy to meet.

The yacht race show, day after day, is being stolen by a 22-year-old London beauty, Miss Patricia Martin.

She's the kind of girl who brightens the eyes of newspaper photographers and movie newsreel cameramen.

"CALL ME PAT"

Heretofore, it's been such social and financial notables as Mrs. John Jacob Astor, 3d, the former Ellen ("Tucky") French of Dedham, Mass.; Miss Jane Pope, voted Newport's prettiest girl last year, and the Gillespie sisters, Eileen and Phyllis, who have been centers of journalistic attention during yacht race week.

But they're just "among those present" this season.

POSED 300 TIMES

She has posed, thus far, for more than 300 still and movie "shots."

Newspaper readers and theater audiences all over the United States will see more of her than of any other current Newport celebrity, not excluding the Vanderbilts and Sopwiths.

"Pat" Martin can afford to be democratic. And she can afford to be nice to cameramen, if she feels like it.

For she enjoys an unassailable social standing in London, where society is society, so the experts say.

AT HOME IN WATER

She came to Newport as the yacht guest of no less a notable than Major Sydney Cotton of London and Melbourne, Australia. He was a war-time ace in the Royal Flying Corps. Today he is a close friend of T. O. M. Sopwith and is a member of the inner circle of British gentlemen-sportsmen.

Make no mistake about it. "Pat" has feminine Newport green-eyed.

"I'm so sorry I haven't had time to make more girl acquaintances here," she said sweetly today. "But my time, somehow, is always so full.

"I must admit, too, I'm a little homesick. Newport doesn't seem to make as much of a holiday of yacht races as we do in England."

Homesick, "Pat" may be. But she isn't lonesome.

POLICE SEIZE LOOT ON TIP BY WOMAN

Without firing a shot, police today trapped the man they call "Public Enemy No. 2 in Massachusetts.

Burlington, Boston and state police crept up to a farmhouse in the bleak light of dawn.

There they arrested James Bunson, 52, state prison parolee, a lieutenant of John J. Kagallon.

Eunson, police said, was helpless in a closet when the police guns were trained on him. He was unarmed in hiding.

GIRL HOLDUP VICTIM

At the points of police pistols warrants were read to him charging the armed holdup of employes in a Dover street, South End, lunchroom, on July 19. A girl cashier, Ruth Lawson, was robbed of $280 at that time.

In the back pocket of another Boston officer was another warrant which would recall to the courts the same man, charging infringement of his terms of parole from Norfolk prison colony five years ago.

Eunson was taken first to Burlington police headquarters, thence to Boston. He will appear in a police headquarters lineup tomorrow morning for examination by victims of recent Boston holdups.

Arrested in Burlington with Eunson was William Powers, owner of the farm house in which Eunson was hiding, according to police. Seized also, said police, was leather stolen in a $7000 robbery in Middleboro, June 24.

Eunson was specifically charged in an indictment warant with participation in the armed robbery

Zionists Elect Ussishkin Head In Zurich Parley

Zurich, Aug. 4 (INS)—Possibly foreshadowing an adverse vote on the British plan to partition the Holy Land, the World Zionist Congress today elected as its chairman Menachem M. Ussishkin, an outstanding opponent of the scheme.

Ussishkin is world president of the Jewish National Fund.

Vigorous criticism of Britain's military administration in Palestine was voiced today by Dr. Chaim Weizmann, president of the World Zionist Organization in his "political address" to the Congress in Zurich Town Hall.

He intimated, however, that acceptance of the partition plan would be the main plank in his program.

While asserting that Jews throughout the world reject the thesis of the British Royal Commission and government that the Palestine mandate is "unworkable," Dr. Weizmann said establishment of a purely Jewish state as recommended would afford opportunities for development under an autonomous government.

CITES TWO CHOICES

The main regions of Jewish settlements would be likely to benefit, he said, despite the fact that the area set aside for Jews would be reduced in scope.

"This congress," he said, "must choose between a Jewish state in a small part of the mandated area, or remaining the minority in a large area."

Dr. Weizmann's criticism of Britain was directed against the administration in Palestine, which, he charged, lacked force and firmness.

"Let me cite," he said, "the relegation of the British army to the role of a spectator during the Arab rebellion."

The British nation, however, he said, should not be held responsible for a state of affairs "resulting largely from the action or inaction of the Palestine administration."

HITS RESTRICTION

Weizmann, whose efforts brought into being the famous Balfour declaration guaranteeing establishment of a Jewish national home in Palestine, bitterly attacked the British government's action in restricting Jewish immigration into the Holy Land to 8000 for the next eight months.

A British-Jewish scientist, whose discoveries in explosives during the World War were considered notable contributions to the allied victory, Weizmann called attention to the need of suffering Jews in Eastern and Central Europe for a haven of refuge, saying:

"The situation of the Jews throughout the world is tragic. Millions of Jews in Central and Eastern Europe find themselves robbed of citizenship and livelihoods. Only in the great democracies of Western Europe, in America, and in a few smaller countries of Europe can Jews feel secure.'

Weizmann sharply assailed from many angles the report of the royal commission which proposed that the Holy Land be split into a sovereign Jewish state, an independent Arab territory and a British mandated corridor to the sea which would include Jerusalem, Bethelem and Nazareth.

URGES CRITICAL STUDY

The Zionist leader, however, urged the congress to give careful and respectul, though critical, consideration to the plan, saying:

"The report must, despite what seems to us to be serious shortcomings, command our greatest respect . . . but the report's main thesis is that the mandate is inherently unworkable.

"That is a proposition we deny. Our denial is supported by our record of achievement in almost every direction in Palestine since 1922. To this, the commission's report itself bears witness."

The eyes of statesmen and 16,000,000 Jews throughout the world were focussed on Zurich as Weizmann opened what seasoned observers said would develop into the most momentous international Jewish gathering since 1897, when Theodore Herzl founded modern Zionism by convoking its first congress at Basle.

The world Zionist president called attention to Jewish progress in the Holy Land, which he said benefitted the Arabs and other non-Jews there, adding:

"But the commission met in Palestine in an atmosphere vitiated and poisoned by six months of violence and terrorism. It failed to realize how much effective government might have nipped the trouble in the bud. Its perspective had been distorted accordingly.

"The commission passed judgment in the shadow of events which should never have been allowed to take place and which could and should have been prevented by firm action in the early stages of the trouble.

HALF-HEARTED TRY

"The fact is that it is not the mandate which is unworkable. The difficulty is that it has been administered by a half-hearted administration which failed to make a really serious attempt to work it."

Weizmann lashed out forcefully against the proposals in the British plan which would give the projected Jewish state only about one-third of Palestine while the Arabs would receive about two-thirds. He also attacked the British Government's white paper, which accompanied publication of the royal commission's report, and which recommended tempoary limitation of Jewish immigration into the Holy Land.

Weizmann declared:

"I would like to call attention to the striking contradiction between the commission's acknowledgement of the justice of our cause and the benefits conferred on non-Jewish inhabitants of Palestine and its recommendations for the restriction of Jewish endeavors in practically every direction.

CITES BIBLE THEME

"It seems to be a model version of the very old theme. The Bible knew all about it. 'Come, let us be wise, lest they multiply.'

"It is a recommendation which seems to have fallen on all too willing ears as far as the government is concerned.

"In their statement of policy, the government, going into circumstances beyond the commission's proposals, announced their intention of imposing a political maximum on Jewish immigration of 8000 persons for the next eight months—a step which appears to be a flat contradiction to the principles laid down by the mandate and against which we must register the strongest protest."

"It is difficult to understand why the government should be in such haste to implement one particular recommendation of the commission while it remains so conscious of the need for full consideration of the other recommendations in the report."

Palestine Meeting Wins Praise of Goldsmith

Screw Photo

Maurice Goldsmith, chairman of the service awards committee of Rho Pi Phi, national druggists' fraternity, today praised the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser for their efforts in bringing the Palestine question to the fore.

Praise for the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser for bringing "the Palestine question in the open to be discussed freely and frankly" at last Sunday's Faneuil Hall meeting was given today by Maurice Goldsmith, chairman of the service awards committee of Rho Pi Phi, national druggists' fraternity.

Goldsmith is also a member of the American Jewish Congress. He declared:

"The Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser, William Randolph Hearst, Carl Dreyfus, publisher, and John A. Malloy, managing editor, are to be congratulated for their distinguished service in behalf of the Jewish people throughout the nation for focusing public attention on the Palestine question.

"At a time when the issues have been clouded by partisanship, the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser courageously step forward to bring the entire question in the open, to be discussed freely and frankly.

"Significant, also, is the site chosen for this open forum—Faneuil Hall—America's historic Cradle of Liberty. From this liberty-hallowed shrine the Torch of Justice will be carried throughout the world.

"The proposed partition of Palestine by Great Britain is a question of interest not only to the Jewish and Arab peoples affected but to all who cherish liberty and freedom.

New Italian Move Paves Way For Peace of All Jittery Europe

the two great powers, whose interests are "complementary" rather than in conflict in the Mediterranean and elsewhere, would be directed against no other single power or group of powers and would work only in the supreme interests of peace and civilization.

Ciano's declaration, giving Europe and the world renewed hope for a realistic peace, follows delicate diplomatic negotiations between London and Rome, the chief aim of which was to dispel the bogey-man of fear, suspicion and mistrust which has hovered maliciously over Anglo-Italian relations in the last several months.

Much has been done apparently to clear the air of mutual suspicions. I asked Ciano:

"What can you say, your excellency, regarding Anglo-Italian relations at the present time?"

He replied:

"I believe a great stride forward has been made towards clearing the atmosphere and, what is more important, in removing mutual suspicions and distrust.

"Italy has been very favorably impressed by the recent frank speeches of Mr. Eden (British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden) and Mr. Duff-Cooper (First Lord of the British Admiralty Alfred Duff-Cooper). These important speeches paved the way for the very important exchange of letters between Il Duce and Chamberlain (British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain). This exchange marked a new phase in the relations between the two countries because the road is now clear to permit an examination of the ways and means of restoring relations between England and Italy upon a plane of traditional friendship."

COUNT GALEAZZO CIANO

Then, I asked:

"Do you consider the gentlemen's agreement of last January still in effect?"

"I am in accord with Mr. Eden in considering the gentlemen's agreement in full force. However, there are certain factors in Anglo-Italian relations which were not covered by the January accord and were left in the shadows. The clarification towards which we must now strive must take into consideration all the points of friction, and be all-inclusive in its explorations, so that a complete understanding can be reached."

QUESTION: "What, then, separates Italy from Britain?"

NO OBSTACLES

"There are no fundamental obstacles or points of difference barring the way to an Anglo-Italian rapprochement. Many factors, which have been weighing heavily upon the relations between the two nations would not have done so or could have been laid aside if there had existed mutual trust and confidence.

QUESTION: "In the light of what you have just said, do you believe an understanding between Britain and Italy is possible?"

"From the indications I have just outlined to you, it is clear that both on the British and on the Italian side there is now a sincere will to come to an understanding. When there is an honest good will between nations, as between ordinary citizens, half the battle is won.

ACT AS STABILIZER

QUESTION: "What will be the effect of an Anglo-Italian rapprochement on the European picture in general and particularly upon Italo-German relations?"

"By virtue of its very nature the re-establishment of friendly relations between England and Italy and the resumption of their cordial co-operation is not and could not be directed against any other country. An Anglo-Italian rapprochement would provide a new stabilizing element for the maintenance of peace in Europe.

"Italo-German friendship would in no way be interfered with by an understanding between Rome and London. Quite on the contrary. One of the fundamental tenets of the Rome-Berlin axis is in fact the collaboration of all nations which desire to do so in the supreme interests of peace and civilization."

Blame Tut's Curse For New Illness

New York, Aug. 4 (AP) — The mystical, if not mythical, "curse of King Tut" was in operation again today.

Herbert E. Winlock, director of the Metropolitan Museum, one of the many scientists present when the inner chamber of Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb first was entered in 1922, was in New York Hospital.

His physician and hospital attendants refused to name the ailment that sent him by ambulance to a private pavilion at the hospital.

More than 25 deaths of those directly or indirectly concerned have been attributed to the "curse," but Winlock not only scoffed at it as superstition but sought to show his dead colleagues had died of natural causes or at natural ages.

He laughed at the ancient belief that the tomb contained the inscription, "Death shall come on swift wings to him that toucheth the tomb of the Pharaoh."

Father's Knife Saves Girl's Life in Hospital

2d DAUGHTER IN EMERGENCY OPERATION

Saved by an emergency operation performed by her own father, just as her sister was saved two years ago, 16-year-old Elsie Barone of Brookline was resting comfortably today at Bellevue Hospital, Brookline.

Elsie was rushed 28 miles by automobile from the family's Scituate summer home, reaching the hospital just in time for an operation before her appendix burst.

Her father, Dr. Joseph Barone, is chief surgeon at the hospital and he was ready in the operating room when his daughter arrived.

Her sister, Constance, 19, who had a similar experience, and who is now employed at the hospital, assisted.

Miss Helen M. Laffey, a registered nurse and close friend of the family, was assigned to the case as special nurse until Elsie is fully recovered.

The patient is a student at Mount St. Joseph Academy in Brighton.

Bitten by Snake to Save Children

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 4 (AP)—Gordon Eager, 39, bitten twice last night by a four-foot copperhead snake while protecting three children watching him clean a show cage at the American School for the Deaf, was out of danger today.

Eager, who gave several snakes to the collection including copperheads and rattlers, is in charge of the collection in the absence of the biology teacher.

The snake's fangs sank into one of Eager's thumbs through a heavy leather glove when he picked the reptile from the cage. He said he could have saved himself by dropping it but was fearful for the children. After being bitten he drove his own auto to a hospital where he was given an anti-venom treatment.

ELSIE BARONE NURSE LAFFEY

Cheerful—and with good reason—today are this nurse and patient. The latter is 16-year-old Elsie Barone of Brookline. Her father, Dr. Joseph Barone, chief surgeon of Bellevue Hospital, Brookline, saved her life by an emergency operation after she had been stricken with acute appendicitis. She was rushed to the hospital from Scituate, where she was vacationing. Nurse Helen M. Laffey is as pleased as Elsie over the young patient's progress.

Col. Hopkins, 64, Dead in Vermont

Hopkins was retired in 1936, for disability. He had served in the army since the Spanish American War. His widow and a daughter, Mrs. James B. Mann, survive.

Funeral services will be held in Burlington tomorrow.

This Should Hold G-Men

Los Angeles, Aug. 4 (INS)—Mrs. June Bates, convicted of attempting to extort $500 from Actor John Boles, was en route to serve a five-year term in the federal prison in Alderson, W. Va., today after leaving a taunt behind her.

"You government men—I hope you all have hangnails," was her only comment

Steal $800 Stamps In Vt. Postoffice

The robbery was reported to John J. Breslin, chief postal inspector of the New England division in Boston by Postmaster Ellis Johnson. Boston inspectors were sent here.

Writes Timilty of His Chance to Save Life

His desire to try to save a life, rather than just "hold a good job," led George A. MacDonald, one of the latest appointees to the Boston police force, to resign his job as a patrolman at Station 6 today—after only two days on the force.

In a letter to Police Commissioner Joseph F. Timilty, MacDonald, who lives in Jeffries street, East Boston, said he was resigning to resume his former job as a companion to a shell-shocked War War veteran, the invalid son of a wealthy Boston man.

"I can always get a job," MacDonald said, "but it is seldom you have a chance to save a person's life."

He explained that he was returning to act as a combined nurse and companion for the war veteran as an act of mercy, because the disabled man has found he cannot go on without him.

"I wasn't acting as his companion a year ago when I took the police examinations," MacDonald said. "Later, I went to serve him, and found how much he needed me.

"When he pleaded with me to return, just after I quit to join the police force, I couldn't refuse him."

MacDonald is the second officer of the recent group of Timilty appointees to resign after only a short time in the department.

He said he would shortly go to New Hampshire to rejoin his war veteran friend at the family summer home.

Policeman's Shots Rout 3 Bandits

Chicago, Aug. 4 (AP)—A policeman acting as a paymaster's guard engaged three holdup men in a Loop gun battle today before hundreds of freightened shoppers.

Policeman William Marshall, 35, and Stenner Stenerson, 58, employes of a wholesale tailoring firm, were accosted by the gunmen as they left the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. with a grip containing $5500.

Marshall's answer was a volley of gun fire. The officer and Stenerson were not hit by several blasts from a sawed-off shotgun fired from the gunmen's car as it sped away.

Policeman Marshall said he believed he wounded two holdup men.

'Get a Man,' Urges Film Spinster

ROSALIND RUSSELL

Hollywood, Aug. 4 (AP)—Rosalind Russell, film spinster, sharply amplified today the feminine axiom of "get a man."

The willowy brunette said unmarried girls have no one to blame but themselves.

And wives, she added, are chiefly responsible for broken homes.

"A girl has to give up a great many things to get a man," is Miss Russell's theory. "'Get a man' means: Get a family, get a home, get a new status—and keep it!

"She has to give up her possessive instincts. She has to fit her time to a man's needs. She had to fit her moods to his moods."

All this, the actress deduced, is the result of the trend toward a 50-50, give-and-take relationship between men and women.

Last fall, when Miss Russell went back to visit her family in Connecticut, she announced:

"I may or may not return a married woman—it all depends.

Life Stake For Ace Gambler

Sir Abe Bailey Loses Leg in Operation

London, Aug. 4 (INS)—Sir Abe Bailey, gold-mining multi-millionaire, horse-racing tycoon and termed "the world's greatest gambler," is fighting for his biggest stake—his life.

He has had his leg amputated, following forming of a clot in an artery, and lies gravely ill in his Mayfair mansion.

Sir Abe began his career at 19 in Cape Town. Against the opposition of his father, a merchant, young Abe arranged a credit whereby he bought tremendous quantities of wool and resold it in London, realizing $150,000 profit. He lost the sum quickly.

The next year Abe went to work as a roadmaker in the new goldfields on The Rand. He began digging for gold with no success.

Bailey was sitting penniless on a hotel doorstep in South Africa when somebody asked him if he could play cricket. He joined a team and went to Natal, where a "fan" promised him $25 for every twenty runs he could make. He made forty.

With the sum won in this fashion as a nucleus, Bailey raised $20,000 in credits and went back to the goldfields. He has never been poor since.

He is reputed to have won more on a single horse race than any other man living. He bet on his own horse, [illegible], in 1902, and won $220,000.

Sir Abe is estimated to be worth $50,000,000.

State F. of L. Faction Battles Move to Drop Labor Board Drive

PUSSY-FOOTING SCORED BY DOUGLAS

By JOHN W. ENGLISH

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Lowell, Aug. 4—Proponents of the resolution calling for disbanding of the National Labor Relations Board served notice today that they will fight hard for their measure on the floor of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor convention here.

George T. Douglas, a delegate from the Haverhill Boot & Shoe Workers' Union, called upon President John F. Gatelee to explain reports that an official of the federation had said this resolution would be killed or revised drastically.

"We presumed we were going to carry on a militant campaign and stop pussy-footing." Douglas declared.

CHARGES LEWIS DICTATION

Declaring that the National Labor Board is "the biggest farce ever formed in this country," and that it was being dictated to by John Lewis of the CIO, Douglas concluded:

"If we can't prove it, we'll withdraw our resolution."

President Gatelee assured Douglas that no official of the federation had said the resolution would be killed or revised and assured him it was entirely up to the convention what action would be taken.

Douglas sat down, without further discussion, but, as in this case, it was evident that the shadow of the CIO hung over the gathering, provoking a split.

MOVE TO HEAL BREACH

Leaders were doing their best, however to heal the breach made yesterday when a resolution was introduced called for a peace pact between the Federation of Labor and the CIO.

Sponsored by a representative group from various sections of the state, the resolution was filed less than 24 hours after John F. Gatelee, president of the Massachusetts federation, had taken an opposite stand by urging aggressive action and a fight to the finish against the CIO.

The cleavage was further evident when it was learned that one of the peace resolution's sponsors, E. A. Johnson, secretary-treasurer of the Boston Building Trades Council, would be a candidate for president of the state federation, against Gatelee.

"UNITY CONVENTION"

The resolution, which was referred to the resolutions committee, would have the convention urge the executive council of the American Federation of Labor and the national advisory committee of the Committee for Industrial Organization issue a joint call for a "unity convention" in which their two organizations, the railroad brotherhood and other independent labor bodies would participate.

Signers of the resolution represented an important bloc. Besides Johnson, they included Margaret F. Reilly of the commercial telegraphers; John P. Cronin of Boston local, No. 1148; John McLaren of Boston, stone masons; William Bjork of Boston, painters; Thomas Burns of Boston, painters; W. T. Perry of the Cambridge Central Labor Union and John E. Roberts of New Bedford, carpenters.

FAVOR SENATE WAGE BILL

Washington, Aug. 4 (INS)—Administration leaders scored a decisive victory today, when the House labor committee voted to make the Black wage-hour bill, as passed by the Senate, the basis of its action. The vote was 17 to three.

The committee then proceeded, in secret session, to consider amendments to the Senate bill demanded by the American Federation of Labor and members of the committee.

Ask Duke of Kent To Be Poland King

London, Aug. 4 (INS)—Polish monarchists, lacking a nominee for king, today turned to the Duke of Kent, younger brother of King George VI of England, as a prospect.

The Polish monarchistic party, according to a daily Mirror story from Warsaw, passed a resolution asking the Duke to become "king of Poland." Princess Marina, duchess of Kent, is related to the line of Russian czars who once ruled Poland.

Study Private N. H. Vote Check

Washington, Aug. 4 (AP)—A House elections committee met in private today to decide whether to examine disputed ballots in the first New Hampshire congressional district election contest.

Ralph E. Langdell, attorney for Representative Arthur B. Jenks, Republican, has demanded that they examine the disputed 108 ballots and offer him another opportunity to refute argument presented by Ralph W. Davis, attorney for Alphonse Roy, Democratic nominee who is contesting Jenks' election.

U. S. WAGE BILL ATTACKED

Fall River, Aug. 4 (AP)—Speaking for a group of Chamber of Commerce executives, Frank W. Dunham, secretary of the Fall River Chamber, said today "we are opposed to the legalization of minimum wage differentials in the Black-Connery bill."

"We do not believe," Dunham said in a statement, "low wages should be a deciding factor in the interplay of competitive forces.

"We do not believe that any one section has a monopoly on manufacturing skill or efficiency. We do not believe that any one section has a monopoly on chiselers. We believe there is very little difference in skill between groups of workers in any two regions.

"We believe the decent, efficient manufacturer—north, south, east, west—should be encouraged to continue paying decent wages. We believe he is entitled to some degree of protection from the chiseler who relies for success on low wages and long hours."

Secretaries from several chambers of commerce in New England, invited to serve on a committee on hour-wage standards, will discuss a program on Friday.

Greeks Celebrate Year of Dictator

Athens, Greece, Aug. 4 (AP)—Thousands of persons poured into this ancient capital today on the first anniversary of the dictatorship of Gen. John Metaxas.

The celebration was opened with prayers in the city's churches, followed by distribution of blessed bread and rolls decorated with the words: "August 4, long live the nation!"

WPA CUTS HIT IN SENATE

Washington, Aug. 4 (AP)—The Senate labor committee recommended today that no WPA worker be dropped from the relief rolls until he has found employment in private industry at prevailing wages.

The committee approved a resolution by Senator Schwellenbach (D) Washington declaring it to be the policy of Congress that in administration of the relief act "there shall be provided work opportunities for all unemployed workers who cannot find employment in private industry."

The WPA would be directed to administer its funds and regulate employment so that no worker would be discharged "who cannot find employment in private industry at wages not less than the prevailing rate."

The resolution also would direct that WPA workers securing temporary private employment should be furloughed and not discharged from WPA rolls.

H. M. Hoke Dies

Chebeague Island, Me., Aug. 4—H. M. Hoke, 70, of Commonwealth avenue, Boston, was dead here today after suffering a heart attack

SECRET MONEY IS TRAILED BY FIN. COM.

The Boston Finance Commission, it was revealed today, is looking for secret safe deposit boxes in extending its Codman Hill Construction Company investigation into Rhode Island.

Armed with authority from Judge Raoul Beaudreau of the superior court, the commission will examine bank records in Providence on Saturday.

The commission is trying to trace $139,000 which, according to Special Counsel George R. Farnum, was withdrawn from the accounts of the Codman Hill Company and its president, William J. Driscoll, here, and mysteriously disposed of.

TRAIL "LUMP" WITHDRAWALS

It has been announced that Providence bank officials would be required to produce the records, if any, of the deposit accounts of individuals connected with the investigation, but today it was disclosed the bank safe deposit vault records are considered even more important.

These safe deposit records, it was explained, will show the dates on which individuals visited the banks to obtain access to their boxes. When he questions the Providence bankers, Attorney Farnum will have with him the Boston bank statements, showing what he calls mysterious lump-sum withdrawals on certain dates.

Late today Robert E. Cunniff, Finance Commission secretary, goes to Providence to retain an attorney to act as commissioner to subpoena the bank records. On Saturday, at the hearing, Farnum will conduct the questioning, probably in the Providence lawyer's office.

The authority obtained from Judge Beoudreau covers five Providence banks, but Farnum said he believed it could be extended to other banks, if necessary.

Tomorrow, in the Boston City Council chamber, Mayor Mansfield will again appear as a witness in the investigation. A renewal of his verbal clashes with Farnum and members of the Finance Commission is expected.

The mayor yesterday demanded that four of the five members resign on the ground they had prejudged the case.

Next week William J. Driscoll, who is in jail for contempt of court in failing to produce his books and records for examination by the commission, will be a witness if Farnum can get the court to issue a writ of habeas corpus authorizing his temporary freedom.

Driscoll, who contends his books were stolen, has applied for full release, but no action has been taken.

Montague's Plea Turns to Lehman

Los Angeles, Aug. 4 (AP)—Apparently heeding the suggestion of California's governor, counsel for John Montague, Hollywood's "mystery man of golf," said today they were preparing a plea to Gov. Lehman of New York, to countermand the request for Montague's extradition on a robbery charge.

Gov. Merriam said that if Montague "has reformed to such an extent as to become a highly exemplary citizen, the man to whom that should be pointed out is the governor of New York."

Nanaimo, B. C., Aug. 4 (US)—Colonel H. E. Mitchell, former aide-de-camp to General John J. Pershing, is dead here today from a sudden heart attack.

Write Film Review

Exclusive Last Call!

Here are Fred MacMurray and Frances Farmer in a scene from the Paramount screen hit, "Exclusive", now showing at the Metropolitan theater. For the best amateur review of the picture—a film play with a newspaper office background—the Boston Evening American and Paramount are offering a prize of $50. Deadline in the contest is 9:00 a. m. tomorrow. You must have your review in the office of the Boston Evening American before that time.

The Exclusive contest ends at 9 a. m. tomorrow (Thursday), and all reviews of the Paramount photoplay hit, "Exclusive," must be in the Boston Evening American office at that time.

There is still time to see the picture, at the Metropolitan Theater. It runs through this evening.

There is still time to win $50 with a review of the picture.

The winning review will be published Friday, with the name of the $50 winner.

This is the seventh and last of the Exclusives. Six readers of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser have already seen their Exclusive news stories, features and human interest stories published. Each has won $50. And the contest ends with the review.

See the picture even if you don't write a review. It is a thrilling story of newspaper life.

And have your review in this office at 9 a. m. tomorrow. That is an ironclad rule.

For most readers, this is their first chance to write a review of a motion picture, although they have read them for years. And this is the first time that $50 has been offered for such writing.

This is your chance.

Discover your hidden talent. Try your hand with a review. And, remember, get it in on time.

VATICAN DENIES RECOGNITION OF FRANCO

Vatican City, Aug. 4 (AP)—A semi-official Vatican statement said today the Holy See is maintaining cordial relations with the Spanish insurgent government, but that no steps have been taken toward formal diplomatic recognition.

The Vatican secretariat described as "inexact" dispatches from Salamanca, seat of the insurgent regime, reporting the insurgents and the Vatican formally were exchanging diplomatic representatives.

It was explained that although the Vatican has given diplomatic approval to the nomination of Pablo de Churruca, Marquis of Aycinena, as insurgent semi-official representative to the Vatican, the situation remains unchanged.

Aycinena is taking the place of the Marquis de Magaz, who is now insurgent ambassador to Berlin.

The statement said Monsignor Ildebrando Antoniutti, apostolic delegate now in insurgent Spain, is not on a diplomatic mission, but is there for humanitarian reasons. The position of Papal delegate is without diplomatic standing.

Reds Hurled Back In Madrid Drive

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Aug. 4 (AP)—Insurgent infantry and artillery were reported today to have hammered the point of Gen. Jose Miaja's salient back out of Villanueva De La Canada on Madrid's western front.

Although the official insurgent communique gave no details of the blow against Madrid's offensive, government sources said Miaja's troops "abandoned" the war torn village, about 15 miles west of the beleagured metropolis, as a strategic move to consolidate positions northeast of the town.

The government advices were considered an admission of another severe setback in the month-old attempt to spear southward into the insurgent rearguard on the capital's western front.

4 in Stolen Car Held After Chase

Four Dorchester youths, taken at gunpoint by police officers after a wild chase today were arrested on suspicion of using without permission an automobile reported stolen from Mrs. Mary Gillis of Pleasant street, Dorchester.

Police said all four of the boys are already waiting grand jury action on complaints of breaking and entering.

Mercury Climbs; Rain Tomorrow

With the mercury shooting upward through the 80s today, the Boston area faced a torrid day and night. The wind was in the southwest and no rain was in sight, according to the weather man.

Tomorrow increasing cloudiness is expected to provide a little relief, and showers are due late in the day.

Today is the anniversary of last year's prize freak of the weather.

On August 4, 1936, the temperature was 92 at 2:40 p.m. One hour and 20 minutes later it was only 69, a drop of 23 degrees. In that period eastern Massachusetts had been visited by the most severe electrical storm in years.

Stowaways Show How They Hid Under Sail on Ship

After having packed a lot of adventure and thrills into 21 hours, these three girl stowaways were back safe today in their Roxbury homes. They are Geraldine Goldman, 18, Pauline Jameson, 16, and Helen Doherty, 18. Coast guardsmen took them off the S. S. Fairfax, as the ship, bound for Norfolk, Va., entered the Cape Cod canal. A 14-year-old boy, John Mitchek of Roxbury, was with them. Released by Sandwich police, they hitch-hiked back to Boston.

3 ROXBURY GIRLS, BOY STOWAWAYS IN VAIN

After a madcap adventure that nearly landed them in jail, and climaxed in their being put off the S. S. Fairfax at the Cape Cod Canal as stowaways, three young girls and a 14-year-old boy were safe at home in Roxbury today.

The girls gave their names as Geraldine Goldman of Stafford street, Helen Doherty of Gerard street, each 18, and Pauline Jameson, 16, of Dennis street.

Then they decided to stay aboard, as the ship pulled away from her moorings. She was bound for Norfolk, Va.

Early today they were removed from the ship by a coast guard boat from the Sandwich station, and put in custody of the sheriff at Sandwich.

After dinner, and a nap in the sheriff's car, they were taken to Quincy in the auto of a tourist who agreed to give them a "lift" as far as that city.

At dawn they began walking into Boston, caught a car at Neponset, and went to the end of the Cambridge subway line.

A veritable "Gulliver's travels" for the adventurers ended shortly after noon when they were discovered in Washington street by a Boston Evening American reporter, and driven to their homes.

Hidden "Female" In Tree Shipment

Pittsburgh, (INS)—Which of the Ginkgo trees from the Land of Nippon is the hidden female? In a shipment here of Ginkgo trees from Japan, all supposed to be male, one, it was learned, was a female stowaway.

The problem is to find it. Tree surgeons say its sex can be determined only by its fruiting. Ginkgo trees grow exceedingly slow and the female must be half a century old before it bears fruit.

Canadian Sloop Safe After Storm

The Canadian sloop Phantom, for which fears were felt yesterday, when radio flashes asked all vessels to keep a sharp lookout for her, passed through Cape Cod canal today, having safely ridden out a violent storm.

The vessel left Lunenburg, N. S., last Friday, bound for the Newport cup races, and had been unreported, with her crew of five, until this morning.

JAPANESE ROUT CHINESE ARMY WITH BOMBS

Peiping, Aug. 4 (AP)—Japanese authorities proclaimed today that continuous bombardment by squadrons of warplanes had routed western concentrations of the Chinese army and blasted a clear path for the southward march of Japanese troops from this conquered Manchu capital.

The Japanese statement declared that the Chinese troops, reported to have been concentrated in force at Paotingfu 85 miles south of here, "perished or fled during the air bombardment."

The announcement, scattered from the sky by Japanese planes in a pamphlet bombardment, proudly stated "all north Hopeh province has been occupied. The troops of the Nanking government will not come north. If they do the Japanese will strike immediately."

A major engagement was expected, however, at Nankow Pass 20 miles north of Peiping where 4,000 Japanese troops were massed for an attack on the Chinese positions north of the great wall.

All Japanese nationals were ordered to evacuate Kalgan, Chinese stronghold and capital of Chahar province 10 miles to the northwest.

The government of China, apprehensive of the safety of the 8,000 Chinese in Japan, was reported to have started their evacuation from the island Empire.

While the Japanese troops at the Great Wall prepared to strike at the Chinese forces in the north, two reinforced Japanese armies, marching in parallel columns in eastern and western Hopeh province, pushed steadily southward against the main defense lines of the Chinese central government troops.

The first fruits of the conquest of North China were believed borne today when the autonomous government of East Hopeh announced it was opening its administrative offices in Peiping. Headquarters of the Japanese-dominated regime had been at Tungchow, 12 miles to the east, until now. Establishment of such a government for virtually all of North China was believed to be one of Japan's major objectives in the undeclared war.

Peiping itself was quiet and all foreigners who have been living in the tent cities set up in the embassy compounds returned to at least temporary residence in their homes.

3 HURT IN CAPE ROAD UPSET

Three Norwood persons were injured today, one seriously, when the car in which they were riding bound for the Cape on route 128, South Braintree, overturned.

Taken to Quincy City Hospital were Joseph De Rose, 30, of Dean street, who police said was the driver; Leo Bohinski of Tremont street, and Helen Millis, 17, of Washington street.

Mrs. Annie Nenartowicz of Washington street and her 10-year-old daughter, Mary, who were also passengers, escaped injury.

The Millis girl was seriously hurt, suffering head injuries. De Rose suffered a fractured left arm and side injuries while Bohinsky received a broken hand.

Body Found in Sea

Block Island, R. I., Aug. 4 (AP) The body of Augustus A. Tierney, 55, of Braman street, Providence, was found today floating in the water near here by a fishing boat. Sheriff Harry Rose of Blockland is investigating the drowning.

'Arsenal' Stolen by Burglars in Cambridge

Evidence that the bandit gang which has executed a series of daring bank and payroll robberies throughout New England is operating out of a Boston headquarters was seen by police today.

Police reached the conclusion after thieves took a small arsenal of pistols and two traveling bags of clothes from a wealthy Cambridge manufacturer's home.

Breaking in through a side window, thieves ransacked the Garden street home of S. Abbott Smith, but ignored all silverware, objects d'art, and other valuable pieces.

They took only guns and men's clothing—both of which would be of importance to such a bandit gang.

Four pistols, including a .32-calibre Smith and Wesson revolver, a small nickle-plated .32-calibre gun, and two old-fashioned pieces, valuable as collector's items, were removed from the library.

Two traveling bags filled with men's clothing, a blue serge suit, a gabardine suit, and other articles of haberdashery were taken from Smith's bedroom. He had left the bags unpacked on the bed, after returning from a trip to Dublin, N. H.

rested as chief "come-on" for the ring.

According to the Secret Service, she used the alias "Mickie Hogan" not only in New York state, but in several Massachusetts cities.

At Coniglio's apartment in a section of New York hitherto unsuspected by the federal agents more than $17,000 in counterfeit 10 and 20-dollar bills were seized.

Also taken into custody were Robert Rosenthal, Anthony Rizzo, Frank Poppalaro, Pompeo Perfetto, Louis Biano and Edward Wagner—alias "Nigger."

TIP FROM BOSTON

Captain Houghton said that the ring supplied counterfeiters in Boston, Cleveland, Baltimore, Kansas City and other cities.

"More than 50 per cent of the counterfeit money passed in the United States passed through the hands of this gang," he declared.

"They had operated successfully in New England states for several months, but we were aware of it. Agents in Boston gave us the first intimation that the thing was more than local."

Arrested here a week ago were Arthur Carcieri, son of a Providence deputy sheriff, and John Gicobbi, of Dighton. Both were accused by Taunton police of attempting to pass counterfeit money at the dog-track. They are awaiting trial, in bail of $2500 each.

Agent Carli, who is given credit for the seizure of the "mob," has been a member of the Secret Service on the Pacific Coast for several years.

He was chosen to play the part of a dealer in counterfeit money because the chieftains of the ring were unaware of his identity.

He is said to have bought the "queer," learned how to merchandise it, then turned over all his evidence to the federal prosecutors.

5 Men Are Held In Lottery Raid

Arrested in a raid on a Tremont street house, after officers broke down the door, five men pleaded not guilty in Roxbury Court today and were held on charges of being connected with a lottery. Judge Hayden continued all cases until September 8.

Arraigned were Leonard Cooper of Howard street, Roxbury; Louis Gold of Flyd street, Dorchester; Alpheus D. Russell of West Springfield street, Roxbury, and Lewis E. Christie of Massachusetts avenue. Pedro Martens of Tremont street, Roxbury, was held for possession of brass knuckles.

Window Washer Arrested in Row

A window washer giving the name of Charles O. Dunn, 23, of Chester street, Somerville, was under arrest on a drunkenness charge today after he had allegedly become incensed when a laundry proprietor refused to let him wash the shop windows.

According to police, the man, angered by the refusal, threw a pail of water on a window in the shop, on Holland street, West Somerville, soaking some of the laundryman's work.

BOMB AND GUNS FOUND IN ERIN

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Aug. 4 (AP)—Police conducted a raid today in the Falls road area, in which they seized a bomb, a rifle, three revolvers and 1000 rounds of ammunition. A butcher was detained for questioning.

Uniformed men and plain-clothes officers started an intensive search for arms.

A week ago a visit to Northern Ireland by King George and Queen Elizabeth was marred by an outburst of terrorism, mostly incendiarism and bombing, which authorities attributed to extremist Republicans.

America Drinking More German Beer

Washington, Aug. 4 (AP)—America is consuming more German beer.

The Commerce Department reported today that shipments from Germany to this country totaled 337,318 gallons during the first five months of 1937, compared with 152,799 gallons in the corresponding period a year ago.

Operating Table Shown in Doctor Attack Trial

Belair, Md., Aug. 4 (AP)—An adjustable operating table loomed today as a major item in the fight of Dr. Armen Greenhut, slender, black-haired physician, against charges he criminally attacked a 13-year-old Baltimore county school girl.

Dr. Greenhut, 39-year-old naturalized native of Austria, is on trial for his life in circuit court here. He is accused of having attacked the girl last May 19 after she had come to his office as a patient.

A crowded courtroom heard Ruth J. McGowan, the girl, testify yesterday that she had been attacked twice in the physician's Dundalk, Md., office.

During the questioning by defense counsel, the operating table was introduced as an exhibit. The alleged attack occurred on the table, the state contends.

Racer Test Fatal

Keene, N. H., Aug. 4—Frank McCoy, 29, of Westmoreland, who had ambitions to be an auto race driver, was dead today after the fatal crash of his home-made racing car during a test run.

Report 25 Tax Evasion Cases To Morgenthau

arge in Massachusetts political circles are special targets of this particular phase of the probe, it was learned, and should a special session of the Federal grand jury be called, they will be dealt with first.

At least a score of other persons, possibly more, may be involved through information unearthed in prosecuting these three cases, it was said.

Lambert's "wrecking crew" is in this field fresh from a spectacular series of triumphs in Chicago and St. Louis where two score men were jailed on charges similar to those the special agents seek to substantiate in Massachusetts.

FIVE NEW AGENTS

The five new agents sent here are trained accountants who will concentrate on the books and records of contractors now in possession of the investigating crew.

Their arrival thus released for field work the agents who went into other states today to check banks.

Throughout this extraordinary investigation it is now evident that all forces of the United States government are working together to make up the tremendous deficit in actual Treasury receipts as contrasted with Morgenthau's estimates.

As was disclosed in the Boston Evening American months ago, the income tax totals fell far short of what was expected. Shortly after this disclosure, the Secretary of the Treasury himself admitted the deficit was about $200,000,000.

"SHOCK TROOPS"

The Boston Evening American revealed at that time the plan to amalgamate the investigating units of the Government for a drive to recoup this deficit.

Lambert's "wrecking crew" are the shock troops in that drive.

In this particular case, the "leads" that the special treasury agents needed came out of the U. S. bankruptcy courts when five different contracting firms filed for reorganization.

Through the information that these firms were forced to submit to bankruptcy referees and court officials for approval of reorganization processes the treasury department saw evasions of taxes on tremendous sums of money—not by the contractors, but by those who received these monies.

"SPECIAL SERVICES"

Some of these sums were reputedly under the heading of disbursements "for special services," "for legal counsel" and the like.

The next step was to determine whether or not the recipients reported receipt of these sums in their regular income tax forms.

According to what the "wrecking crew" has unearthed in its three months' probe here, such reports were not made in many instances. That opened the field wide. The investigation then centered on three outstanding individuals.

Books and records of about 35 contracting companies were then called in to determine how many disbursements they had made under the questioned headings and to whom they were made.

MUM ON CONTENTS

The reports on the 25 cases which were dispatched to the Treasury today are part of this investigation. Special Investigator Lambert, as was expected, positively refused to state what was contained in these reports.

It is perfectly obvious, however, that if it is established that huge "gifts" were made to politicians by concerns engaged in public works contracts, the lid will be lifted on a situation that will rock the entire country.

Not only will the Treasury Department have won its objective of tapping a hitherto concealed vein of revenue, but the firms which have paid out monies to the politicians will have considerable explaining to do, since federal funds are involved in the public works projects.

ACTIVITY IN HOTELS

Although the Lambert "wrecking crew" is working out of the federal building here, its activities are being carried on in a number of downtown hotels, it was learned.

A visitor to one of these hotel suites, the Boston Evening American was reliably informed, was a former high official of Middlesex county. He is said to have turned over to Lambert important information concerning the activities of the "Big Three" in this probe.

According to this newspaper's source of information, this Middlesex county official has, on numerous occasions, acted as a "middle-man" for various contractors, supplying them with cash loans to enable them to handle public works projects.

Because of his financial interest, he had the right to know how awards were being disbursed and to whom they were being disbursed and it is said that he gave the Treasury agents information they sought on certain "gifts" to certain politicians by these contracting companies.

The procedure being followed by this special crew of Treasury agents in this particular probe is similar to the procedure followed by another group in the illicit alcohol manufacturing investigation.

Again it was shown that the various wings of government departments are working together to increase the fallen Treasury receipts.

When alcohol tax unit inspectors uncovered big stills some months ago, they were able to estimate just about how much income the operators were receiving. They did this by a scrutiny of the amounts of grain, sugar and other ingredients purchased and the capacity of the distilling plants.

The information thus garnered was turned over to the Treasury Department and, as a result, several large operators were forced to pay back taxes on their illegal receipts, plus large fines for not reporting them. The same thing was done in the cases of gambling, lottery, number pool and other arrests.

'Profit Convict' at Last Agrees to Take Parole

Joseph Treboski, state prison inmate, who refused a parole last November because "I can make more money in prison than I can outside," was granted another parole today by the state board of parole and pardons—and accepted it.

This was announced by Chairman Ralph W. Robart of the parole board, who said Treboski would be released August 14.

Treboski was sentenced May 22, 1934, in Worcester, to 2½ to 4 years for breaking and entering in the night time.

He was eligible for parole November 21, but refused it. Treboski, a cabinet maker, works in the carpenter shop in state prison and has made a net profit selling miniature altars and similar articles to visitors.

His case was recommended by the parole board at the request of J. J. O'Brien of the Worcester Welfare Board, who said the prisoner was needed to support three dependent children.

3 Hurt in Conn. Munitions Blast

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 4 (AP)—An explosion injured three employes today in a shell loading department of the Remington Arms Company. Melvin Chapin, Anne Feeney and Mary Sinchuk all suffered contusions and were taken to Bridgeport Hospital.

The explosion occurred when Chapin dumped a box of primed rim fire shells into a hopper. The hopper was wrecked and debris scattered about the room.

S. A. General Dies

WOMAN'S CLUE LEADS 2 INTO NET

WILLIAM POWERS DETECTIVE JOS. McGOVERN JAMES EUNSON

KIDNAPED CHILD CALLED 'HOAX' BABY

let Gilbert of the state's attorney's police that "Horst was the victim of a fraud perpetrated by his wife." Gilbert said Horst was notified he was a father, and found Mrs. Horst in bed with a new-born baby and was congratulated by friends.

Mrs. Lydia Regan told Crowley she was not married when the child was born, and had let the baby be taken away for care, but regretted it at once.

DECIDED ON "SNATCH"

She said:

"I've looked everywhere for him since. Now that I'm married I can care for him. It was only recently that Ewert told me where he was.

"John and I knew it would be hopeless to ask the Horsts to give Donald up. So we decided just to take him. We didn't think Mrs. Horst would raise such a row about it, knowing the circumstances of the birth."

The "kidnaping" occurred late yesterday while Donald was playing in a sandpile with his supposed mother, Martha Horst, 30, who still insists the child is her own, near his side.

Today's denouement came only after Otto Horst had obtained more than $5000 in cash to pay the ransom which Mrs. Horst said was demanded by telephone shortly after the baby was seized.

RIVAL CLAIMS

Mrs. Regan told Crowley that Donald was born to her on January 6, 1935, and named Dr. John A. Rose, the same physician whom Mrs. Horst had said delivered the baby to her, as the attending physician.

Mrs. Horst, informed Mrs. Regan claimed the baby, indignantly declared:

"Of course the baby is mine. Why was $5000 ransom demanded if we weren't the parents?"

Horst said:

"The child is my son, and I would be glad to take any kind of a test to prove it. The story that he isn't mine is ridiculous."

Whether any ransom was demanded was another matter in dispute. Mrs. Horst declared the $5000 was demanded soon after the "snatch," by telephone.

STORY CALLED FAKE

Mrs. Regan, however, denied this.

"That's story's a fake," she declared. "The boy was born to me at Ewert's home (in Chicago). We tried to get him back, and that's all there is to it."

Mrs. Regan was referring to Fred Ewert, former chauffeur for Dr. Rose. She said Ewert drove the "kidnap car" when she took the boy. Ewert, an ex-convict, was the object of the extensive manhunt.

According to Crowley, Mrs. Regan's story was this:

Donald was born to her in 1935 and Regan, a machinist, was the father, but they were not married. The attending physician, Dr. Rose, told the mother he knew a "wealthy man" who wanted a child.

Mrs. Regan agreed to let Dr. Rose arrange for care of the child, but believed it was a temporary arrangement and signed no papers.

The child was taken from Mrs. Regan 15 minutes after its birth at the home of Ewert. Ewert was a chauffeur for Dr. Rose.

In divulging the above, Crowley added his investigation indicated the baby then was given into the care of Mr. and Mrs. Horst and a birth certificate was filed purporting to show the Horsts were the natural parents.

Recently Ewert told Mrs. Regan the Horst's child was hers, Crowley said, and Mrs. Regan decided to take it "at the first opportunity."

WIDE INVESTIGATION

Capt. Daniel Gilbert of the state's attorney's police said he had ordered his men to round up "everybody" who had any connection whatever with the birth of this child.

While Crowley said Mrs. Regan told him the child was born at Ewert's home, a birth certificate for Donald Otto Horst asserted the boy was born to Mrs. Horst on January 4, 1935, at another residence, the home of friends of the Horsts.

Captain Gilbert added another baffling phase to the case by declaring "Horst was the victim of a fraud perpetrated by his wife."

Gilbert said his investigators intended to question Dr. Rose, now visiting in Batavia, N. Y., as well as the Reagns, the Horsts, the Ewerts and all others concerned.

DEBATE NEARS ON SUGAR BILL

Washington, Aug. 4 (AP)—The rules committee cleared the way today for House debate on a new sugar control bill. The bill has been opposed by some administration officials on the ground that it would discriminate against Hawaii and Puerto Rico.

The committee granted a rule giving the legislation privileged status under which it might be called up tomorrow. Four hours debate will be allowed.

The action was taken after a hearing at which delegates King (R.), of Hawaii; Iglesias (D.), of Puerto Rico, and Representative Lanzetta (D.), of New York, asked that the measure be kept from the floor.

Chairman Jones (D.), of Texas, of the House agriculture committee which drafted the legislation described the bill as "a fair one" approved by all but one member of his committee.

Bumper Blueberry Crop

Concord, N. H., Aug. 4 (AP)—New Hampshire's blueberry crop will exceed a quarter of a million quarts this year, the state Department of Agriculture today estimated.

PAL OF STATE'S 'ENEMY NO. 1' CAPTURED

on July 10 of Miss Lawson, cashier for the Standard Lunch Company, Washington street, Dedham. Two other men who participated in the holdup, which netted the trio $280, have been sent to prison.

WOMAN GIVES CLUE

A mysterious tip from a woman was responsible for the raid and led a heavily armed force of officers to the hideout following a state-wide search since Saturday when Kilgallon was captured and Eunson escaped during a running gun chase through the crowded streets of Mattapan.

Acting on the woman's telephoned information, five State police officers and five Boston police sergeants hid in the woods surrounding the Burlington farmhouse until just before dawn this morning.

As the first faint streaks of gray appeared in the east they rushed the dwelling with drawn guns. Eunson, trapped, rushed into a clothes close, and it was Powers' nervousness police said, which gave him away.

GAVE HIM JOB

The latter protested that he knew nothing of the paroled convict's activities, maintaining that the man had come to his farm yesterday and that he had employed him as a hired hand.

Three boxes of leather soles were found in the farmhouse, however, and one in the barn—said by police to be part of loot in the $7000 leather robbery at Middleboro.

KILGALLON SEIZED

Last Saturday seven state and Boston police, who had been on the trail of Massachusetts' Public Enemy No. 1 and his pal, located them in Mattapan.

With drawn revolvers they chased the pair for a quarter of a mile through crowded Mattapan streets, capturing Kilgallon in a hail of gunfire but losing Eunson—until today.

The police at once questioned Eunson about several robberies, including the $3,000 safe "job" at the Red Coach Grill, Wayland, but he denied participation in any crime.

He admitted, however, according to police, that he had been in a Dorchester house with Kilgallon several days ago when police failed in an attempt to trap the two suspects. But he said it was "just a coincidence"—that he did not know the police were looking for anybody in the house.

SAYS HE FEARED ROBBERS

Eunson gave his residence as Lowell street, Burlington, and said he had been driving a truck in Burlington up to six months ago.

Questioned as to why he was found hiding in the farmhouse closet, he said he thought the police were "housebreakers" and he was frightened.

He then refused to answer further questions until he consulted his attorney.

Those who had been trailing the pair were the same who were in on the "showdown" this morning.

The raid was conducted by State Police Lieutenant Detectives Joseph Ferrari and Jack Dempsey, Sergeants William T. Delaney and Joseph Burke and State Trooper John Powers and Boston Police Sergeants James V. Crowley, Leonard Banks, Thomas Conaty, William Bonner and Joseph McGovern.

FLORIDA DENIES FUGITIVE CLAIM

A general denial that the State of Florida uses the ball and chain system for convicts and that prisoners are inhumanely treated was made today by Florida prison officers at an extradition hearing before Assistant Attorney-General James J. Bacigalupo at the State House.

The hearing is at the request of Governor Fred P. Cone of Florida for the extradition of Forrest Hill, alias Mayo Collins, Negro fugitive from the Florida state prison.

F. W. Wiggins, prison transfer agent, and John Sheedy of Boston, former special investigator for ex-Governor Sholtz of Florida, denied charges made by Hill that he was brutally treated in the Bradford County prison camp during the 18 days he was confined there before his escape.

Hill was sentenced to 10 years in the Florida State Prison for robbery in 1924. He was recently arrested by Boston police as a suspicious person and his true identity then revealed.

Belgian Line Crossed 23 Years Ago

Brussels, Aug. 4 (AP)—Church bells tolled throughout Belgium today to remind the nation that just 23 years ago the first German troops crossed the frontier, drawing Belgium into the World War.

At exactly 8:02 a. m., Aug. 4, 1914, the Uhlan patrol passed the border marker at Gemmenich after Belgium had rejected the ultimatum demanding free passage for the German armies.

The strategic roads along the border over which the German armies passed are now mined and are permanently guarded. In case of danger of invasion they would be blown up at once.

Pants Sink Old British Tradition

Club Folk Titter At Peeress' Stunt

Cowes, Eng., Aug. 14 (AP)—The gayer folk who belong to "the world's most exclusive club" tittered in their teacups today about Viscountess Hinchingbrooke's blue linen pants—and how she got away with wearing them.

There was none, however, to deny that the young and attractive peeress had sunk successfully the strict women's dress traditions of the Royal Yacht Squadron.

She walked across the club's trim lawn yesterday in bright blue linen slacks, sat down and sipped her tea with supreme indifference.

But she was not ejected. She finished her tea, under the full glare of distinguished spectators, including Queen Victoria's daughter, the 80-year-old Princess Beatrice.

No one ever had done quite that on the grounds of the "squadron," which snubs "first generation millionaires" and has just about 250 members.

The place is so sedate that women smoke only in groups and are expected to appear in blue or gray flannel suits. Men may wear only yachting costume.

Jail Music Lover for Esplanade Applause

Music that hath charms landed Everett J. Costello, a South End music lover, in jail today.

His heart still throbbing from the ecstasy of the crescendos of that last Beethoven Symphony Arthur Fiedler and the orchestra played at the Esplanade concert last night, Costello told Judge Elijah Adlow today:

"Jazz leaves me cold. I don't go for swing, or the rumba.

"But classical music—ah!

"Maybe I did applaud longer and louder than anyone else at the concert, Judge, but I am a lover of music. Classical music does something to me.'"

Judge Adlow, however, inclines to the school of music appreciation which applauds delicately.

Sentencing Costello to 10 days in jail for drunkenness, Judge Adlow admonished:

"Perhaps you had better write Mr. Fiedler a letter next time, rather than applaud with beer bottles."

Quin Emilie Gains, But Still Must Stay in Bed

Callander, Ont., Aug. 4 (INS)—Emilie Dionne, third largest of the quintuplets, who is suffering from a "mild respiratory infection," was described today as "quite convalescent" by the secretary of Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, the quints' physician.

"Dr. Dafoe says she will have to stay in bed for a couple of days, purely as a precautionary measure," the secretary said. "That means she won't be able to accompany the other four children to their open air playground for the rest of the week.

"The other four are in perfect health. They were a bit disappointed this morning because a heavy rain prevented them from going out in the playground. But if the weather turns nice, they'll certainly be there."

Marie, who cut her lip, has been proudly displaying the tape Dr. Dafoe put over it.

NAVY GIVES UP HOPE FOR 14 ON AIRLINER

Washington, Aug. 4 (INS)—All hope of finding any survivors of the crash of the ill-fated Pan-American-Grace airliner Santa Maria has been abandoned by the Navy, Admiral William D. Leahy admitted today.

However, naval vessels are still searching the area.

All Aboard Feared Victims of Sharks

Cristobal, C. Z., Aug. 4 (INS)—Belief that swift death in a shark-infested sea engulfed the 14 persons aboard the Pan-American-Grace Airways flying boat Santa Maria grew today, as a 24-hour search brought no sign of any survivor.

An early theory that lightning crippled the plane as it was nearing Cristobal from Lima, Peru, was discounted by E. J. Brown, manager of the Grace line.

"No evidences of charred wood have been found," he said. "The wreckage picked up includes cushions from inside the plane. It is possible the pilot misjudged his altitude and struck the water head-on, throwing the passengers into the shark-infested sea."

Meanwhile, mine-sweepers of the United States Navy grappled to raise the wreckage.

As authorities sought an explanation for the crash, 70 miles off Cristobal, some clung to a minute hope that the 11 passengers and three crew members might have made land.

Into the port of horrified Cristobal the steamer Lapwing brought the first remnants of the plane—life belts. A deflated rubber life raft, presence of which indicated that the passengers made some effort to launch it, a smashed piece of wing and two pouches containing 55 pieces of mail, postmarked La Paz Bolivia.

2 U. S. Men Named By Church Council

Edinburgh, Scotland, Aug. 4 (AP)—The second world conference on faith and order today selected Dr. J. Ross Stevenson, of Princeton, N. J., to head a committee investigating proposals for a world council of churches.

Dr. George W. Richards, of Lancaster, Pa., was chosen to head one of the four main commissions of the conference—"The Church of Christ and the Word of God."

The Brighter Side

By DAMON RUNYON

Copyright, 1937, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved. Distributed by Universal Service.

We have heard various estimates on the amount of money paid in this country annually in alimony and separate maintenance. Some of these estimates run as high as $1,000,000,000.

Damon Runyon

This may sound exaggerated, yet a dispatch from Los Angeles fixes a figure of $10,000,000 per year for Los Angeles county alone, so on that basis, the billion estimate for the entire country is not at all fantastic.

Practically all these alimony and separate maintenance payments are made by the gentlemen of the U. S. A., of course.

As a matter of fact, we have heard of but few cases of the payment of alimony or separate maintenance by ladies, and we understand that in all of these cases the ladies required to make the payments consider the gentlemen who accept them no gentlemen.

Nor do other gentlemen, for that matter.

ON RECEIVING END

The ladies of this country contend for equality with the gentlemen in almost everything—voting, job-holding, jury duty, and drinking in barrooms. But when it comes to paying alimony or separate maintenance, the ladies seem quite willing to give the gentlemen the sole and exclusive privileges in that field. All the ladies ask is to be on the receiving end.

Well, we think that is fair enough in most cases. We do not think that any gentleman would argue against the general principle of alimony and separate maintenance payments, in reason.

In fact, about all that the gentlemen who are making these payments ever have to say on the subject is that they think the government is pretty mean in not permitting the payments to be written off the income tax.

LADIES MIGHT PAY

Still, that might involve the ladies receiving the payment having to pay an income tax, too, and then poor Mr. Helvering, of the Income Tax Department in Washington, would have his troubles unjustly increased.

The ladies would be around saying some mighty cutting things about Mr. Helvering's department, and Mr. Helvering has about all he can bear in the cutting things said about his department by the gentlemen.

Where there are children, or where a lady is incapacitated by years, or limitations, from making her own living, there can be no question as to the complete justice of alimony and separate maintenance, and these payments may quite reasonably be a fair proportion of a gentleman's income and accumulations. There is no argument here.

O. K. WITH MANY

We are pretty sure that many ladies who are compelled to accept alimony or separate maintenance payments to carry on for themselves and children, would be tickled to death if they could be wholly independent of these payments.

They would be delighted to be able to hurl the payments into the moustache of the gentleman making same, and say:

"Take your dirty old money, and chase yourself up an alley and never let me see you again."

But, we regret to say that there are many other ladies who are a little bit wolfish about this alimony and separate maintenance, and who make something of a racket of it.

They take a fiendish delight in making a gentleman sweat and suffer. The alimony and separate maintenance laws of this country are responsible for some astounding injustices, but more than that they are responsible for transforming some rather pleasing looking ladies into mighty ornery human beings.

SPITE PAYMENTS

A big percentage of the alimony and separate maintenance payments in this country are what you might call spite payments, based mainly on the fury of some lady scorned.

Some of them, indeed, amount to legal blackmail. They represent a merciless bleeding of luckless gentlemen who could not stand their ladies any longer, and who, in their eagerness to get rid of them agreed to whatever the ladies asked at the moment of asking.

And so these gentlemen pay, and pay. We know gentlemen in New York who have paid alimony for 25 years, and always the original amount agreed upon. The fact that at times they were not doing any too well made no difference to their ladies. The gentlemen had to pay—or else. They may have been married just a few years, but they have been paying off ever since, and they will continue to pay off to the day of their death.

SIMPLE JUSTICE

We repeat that it is only simple justice that a lady who has given quite a spell of her life to a gentleman in matrimonial partnership, and who has borne him children, and assisted in his success, is entitled to a considerable fee when the split-out comes. Even if she is the one who desires the split-out.

But, why a young lady with no children and with years of life before her should want to make a future of alimony or separate maintenance from some egg who does not like her, and that she despises, is difficult to understand.

Can it be that these ladies are lacking in what you might term sporting spirit?

New York, Aug. 4—A commercial version of that "foolproof" airplane the Department of Commerce used to gossip about basked in the sun at Roosevelt Field today, looking like a grasshopper with too much pituitary.

"You're a pilot, aren't you?" asked the man who was demonstrating it.

"No," I said.

He beamed.

"That's just dandy, just dandy, that's swell," he said, rubbing his hands together.

People like that don't mean well.

The cabin was carpeted and cushioned as well as the family car. Before the pilot was the wheel or "stick," which controls the elevators and ailerons. The ailerons serve the function of a rudder.

We taxied on to the field and swung around into the wind.

"Now," said the man, "we made this ship to operate like an automobile. Turn the control wheel on the ground and it guides like any car. Turn it in the air and it does the same thing.

"Take it."

He dropped the stick into my lap. It operates on a control column swivel.

I pulled back on the wheel. The motor behind us—it sets between two metal booms leading to the tail surfaces from the cabin—was shrieking like a bleachers crowd at the Yankee Stadium with three on and DiMaggio up. The air speed indicator showed 55 miles an hour.

The machine lifted, climbed.

Well, that was easy. But I had to get down again.

I turned the wheel right. Too far. We were standing on the tip of the right wing. Now left. Too far.

I let go. Given its head, the plane came to an even keel.

Pretty soon the man motioned me back toward the field. I tried to remember everything I had read about landings: Maintain flying speed; don't level off too soon.

"You do it," I yelled to the man.

He shook his head.

"Nose up," he said as we throttled down.

We coasted in, air speed 40, wings even and my insurance paid up. We were six fet off the ground. It looked like that, anyway. A man can't be sure when he's myopic.

"Ease her," said the man.

The wheels of the tricycle landing gear hit the ground. We bounced. After a spell we stopped.

"Perfect!" the man said, "perfect! Couldn't have done better myself."

They are making the machines (Stearman-Hammond) out in south San Francisco now. This one, at least 20 miles faster than the Department of Commerce experimental model, was brought east for demonstration.

The manufacturers say it can't spin, nose over or ground loop, that you can come down at 1200 feet a minute and not dislodge that temporary filling in your right molar, and that pretty soon thousands will be flying them.

You can get 18 miles to the gallon and cruise at 115 miles an hour.

Right now the price is about 12 times that of a low-cost automobile but they hope to bring that down with bigger production.

2 DESTROYERS COLLIDE IN FOG

San Francisco, Aug. 4 (US)—Limping into port following a collision in a dense fog at sea, two United States destroyers were sent to drydock at the Mare Island Navy Yard here.

The U. S. S. Worden had a seven-foot hole in her bow after ramming the U. S. S. Reid, according to radio advices received here by the marine department of the Chamber of Commerce.

Bride, 11, Sorry, Loves Only Doll

Poplar Bluff, Mo., Aug. 4 (AP)—Mary Frances Grimes, 11, sobbed to authorities today she was "sorry" she married 67-year-old William H. Grimes, because she "didn't love anyone but her doll."

Grimes, held in Butler County jail on charges of perjury in falsifying the girl's age and of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, told Sheriff Hammons:

Mary Frances was married to Grimes, a cotton picker, last week.

Grimes told the sheriff he had been living at the home of the girl's parents. Her father, J. J. Alexander, consented to the marriage, he said.

THE GOVERNORS MURPHY

Frank-Mich.

Once Toiled for $1.40 Per Day

Detroit, Aug. 4 (INS)—Governor Frank Murphy of Michigan today disclosed that he himself once was a $1.40-a-day "wage slave" whose life was ruled by a factory whistle.

Explaining his deep interest in labor's current struggles and giving a new insight into the life of the man who settled the great General Motors and Chrysler auto strikes, the Michigan governor told of a time when a 6 a. m. whistle summoned him from bed in Harbor Beach, Mich., to work until 6 p. m., six days a week.

"It was a slave's life," declared the red-headed chief executive.

"A factory whistle directed our lives," he continued. "We were awakened by a whistle; we ate when the whistle granted leave and we went to bed when the factory siren shrieked its permission across the countryside.

SCHEDULE MERCILESS

"I was a boy then, but I realized the schedule was merciless, giving few men a chance to see their families.

"I hated labor slavery; not for what it might do to me, but for what I saw it do to other men and boys."

This period in Murphy's life was during his high school and college vacations. He worked in Harbor Beach's one industry—a starch factory. For five years he spent the summers ladling liquid starch into troughs, piling crates of the liquid onto trucks and sometimes working at ovens where the temperature was 140 degrees.

The experience left more than one scar, both mentally and physically, including a hernia from which the governor still suffers.

WITNESSED STRUGGLE

"During those five years, I witnessed labor's struggle from the inside," the governor revealed. "I was a part of it. And one year I returned from summer vacation to the university and heard Bishop Charles D. Williams of the Protestant Episcopal church say that no nation can long survive if any group feels a sense of injustice and insecurity. That statement was a trumpet blast to me.

"Since that day I have been pledged to the fight for universal security. We can have no peace until there is security for both industry and labor."

As the governor recalled his days of actual labor, it shed new light on his actions during the recent strikes, and he said that criticism of his position meant little to him because "I know in my heart I have been right." He believes human lives are most important and that men and women are entitled to a full measure of this world's happiness.

He concluded the story of his own work days with the words: "I have never forgotten them."

TROOPERS NAB FIVE SUSPECTS

Northampton, Aug. 4 (AP)—Five men were booked at the state police barracks here early today on charges of robbery while armed.

State police accused the five of the hold-up and robbery of a man and wife of $400 on the Belchertown-Ware road a week ago.

State Trooper Joseph A. Keating said the men were booked as Harold E. Fountain, 31, of Springfield; Giacomo Galloni, 23, of Springfield; Henry R. Desautels, 36, of Holyoke; Sebastian Skiba, 32, of Holyoke; and Stanley J. Swidrak, 21, of Holyoke.

Accused of Sale Of Worthless 'Time'

Haverhill, Aug. 4—Richard E. Felker, 29, of Main street, Bradford, faced district court today on three counts of larceny in connection with his alleged selling of "time" on a radio station which was never broadcast.

Felker is charged with having induced local and suburban merchants to contribute $2 or $3 for advertising "plugs" on the broadcast of a baseball game. Police said he has no connection with the radio station and made no arrangements for the broadcast.

VAN DEVANTER AVOIDS ISSUE

Simpsonville, Md., Aug. 4 (INS)—Retired Supreme Court Justice Willis van Devanter will raise no grave constitutional issue by seeking to sit on the high court again, even though noted Senate constitutional lawyers claim that President Roosevelt cannot appoint a successor because, they say, no vacancy exists.

Justice Van Devanter—he still is a justice despite retirement—plans to accept temporary assignments as a Circuit Court justice in one or more of the 10 circuit courts of the country.

The name of the 78-year-old justice, who asked to be retired from the duties of the high court June 2, was projected into the spotlight again when Senator Borah (R.) of Idaho told a startled Senate that no vacancy exists on the court.

Naming of Justice This Session Seen

Washington, Aug. 4 (AP)—The belief that President Roosevelt will nominate a successor to Justice Van Devanter before Congress adjourns increased today among high administration supporters. Mr. Roosevelt himself gave that impression yesterday in a press conference in which he repeatedly talked of the time when the nomination "goes to the Senate."

A recess appointment, such as Attorney General Cummings said was permissible, would not go to the Senate until next year.

Some of the President's advisers said they were urging him to make the selection if possible while Congress is in session, so that the Supreme Court might be at full strength for the fall term without a recess appointment.

Senator Vandenberg (R.) of Michigan has offered a resolution to declare the sense of the Senate against such a recess selection.

Senator Borah (R.) of Idaho contended yesterday that there was no vacancy on the court.

Racing Board Probe Threatened

Filing of a bill to investigate the State Racing Commission was awaited today after the commission had refused to grant a dog-racing license to the Plymouth County Agricultural Society during its annual fair, August 16 to August 21.

Counsel for the society declared powerful interests influenced the commissioner's refusal and called on all fair societies to protest. He announced he would file the investigation bill.

Bridegroom Killed

New Marlboro, Aug. 4—Vernon Woodin, 20, married only two weeks, was dead here today as the result of an automobile crash in which his neck was broken. His bride was unhurt.

He'll Decide Bridal Blood Test Bill

Concord, N. H., August 4—The fate of eloping couples who have been patronizing the romantic "Gretna Greens," which dot the countryside just this side of the Massachusetts line was up to Governor Francis P. Murphy today when he received from the legislature for signature or veto the pre-marriage "blood test" law.

Opinion is divided as to the Governor's possible action. The Governor had wished to have the matter studied for two years by an "interim commission," but the legislature by a decisive vote passed the bill, to become operative October 31 of next year.

If the bill is signed, elopers will find it necessary to wait several days for completion of blood tests and forwarding of the required papers, which must be presented before a license is granted. This would render hasty marriages virtually impossible.

The law provides that the blood test must be taken within the 30 days prior to the granting of the marriage license. While there was considerable confusion as to the manner in which its provisions would be applied, most officials felt that a delay of at least four or five days between the taking of the tests and certification is inevitable.

LABOR TO O. K. LA GUARDIA

New York, Aug. 4 (AP)—Labor will open formally tonight its campaign to re-elect "reform mayor" Fiorello H. Laguardia, but there was slight hope of immediate fusionist agreement on candidates for other offices.

Alex Rose, secretary of the American Labor party, whose state executive committee meets tonight to endorse Laguardia, said nominations for other offices on the proposed fusion ticket would be withheld until after the September 16 primary.

The ticket, proposed by Kenneth F. Simpson, New York county Republican chairman, has been assailed as "partisan" by Samuel Seabury, head of a citizens non-partisan committee supporting Laguardia.

Rose added that the labor party would not, under any circumstances, nominate a candidate who was not on the same ticket with the mayor.

Meanwhile, Tammany leader Christopher D. Sullivan squelched reports that New York's Democrats, divided between support of United States Senator Royal S. Copeland and Grover A. Whalen, would unite on a compromise mayoralty candidate.

200 More Strike At Shoe Plants

Haverhill, August 4—Demands for a 20 per cent pay raise by the United Shoe and Leather Workers' Union, a CIO affiliate, were expected to be modified today as three more plant strikes added 200 more workers to the walkout total.

Principal of the new strikes was in the Engel-Lewis Company, Inc., in Merrimac, where 125 walked out. The State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration is still in negotiations with manufacturers and union officials.

2 Hit by Autos

Ralph Quinn, 23, of Puritan avenue, and Joseph Kelley, 16, of East street, both of Dorchester, were under treatment today for injuries sustained when they were struck by an automobile on Dorchester Bay bridge, Dorchester.

He's Not a Man To Sopwith!

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

Looks like Vanderbilt and Sopwith are hanging up records for slow freight. Those two lads spend a million dollars to get a breeze we can kick up with a two-dollar electric fan.

There ain't much interest in the boat races since Tommy Lipton sailed over the horizon. A trip to Newport will convince you that sailor pants don't keep you from getting seasick.

There's been too much protesting lately. That's because some smart newspapermen establish a precedent by interviewing a loser.

Sails are limited to a certain size but there ain't no limit on protest flags. But we like to read of a boat race because that means a breeze and we can always use a breeze in August.

Tuna Landed

Newburyport, Aug. 4—Newburyport's first tuna of the season, a 400-pound, 7-foot-long giant, was ready for consumption today after it had been harpooned by Malcolm Hudson, 22, off Plum Island, and captured after a 4-hour fight.

Prison Film To Be Shown Next Week

"San Quentin," Warner Brother's powerful, hard-hitting screen drama which has caused nation-wide comment because of its daring and fearless revelations of life and conditions behind the walls of a great prison will have its New England premiere on the twin screens of the Paramount and Fenway Theaters beginning Thursday, August 12.

Pat O'Brien and Humphrey Bogart, co-stars in some of Hollywood's most sensational screen documents, play the leading roles in this much-heralded prison drama. Ann Sheridan, Barton MacLane, Gordon Oliver and Veda Borg top the supporting cast.

Old Spanish Landmark In "The Firefly" Film

News despatches from Vittoria, Spain, indicate that the Spanish Civil War has wiped out old landmarks which were copied by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer research and art departments as sets for "The Firefly"—starring Jeanettee MacDonald with Allan Jones and Warren William in the leading male roles.

The Basque country now under fire is reproduced in sequences of the romantic musical which will have its first New England showing on the screen of the Colonial Theater, opening with a brilliant Hollywood premiere Monday night, August 9. An ancient inn outside Vittoria was copied for one of the prinicipal sets.

The original of the Madrid cafe, shown in the opening sequence, in which Jeanette MacDonald dances, no longer stands, according to wires received from M-G-M's Paris office, and the film settings themselves and the present film reproduction will be the only permanent record of many of those old buildings, now wrecked by shell fire.

Inasmuch as the action of the picture moves from Madrid to Vittoria, thence across the Pyrenees to Bayonne, Southern France, and eventually back to Madrid, it follows closely the battle lines of the present campaign. Because of the civil war, research for the film was carried on through the Paris office instead of Madrid.

This probably will come out into the open pretty soon anyway, but you may as well have it now . . . The matter of the system under which welfare recipients are working at present, much to their disgust and in spite of their hollerings . . . The system is that of Patrick Moynihan, executive director of the department, and under it the welfare recipients must work from Mon. a. m. to Fri. nite . . . That leaves them only Saturday in which to look for a job and get off the welfare rolls . . . and YOU know how easy it is to talk to ANY biznizman when he's either started on the weekend or is just packing the two jugs . . .

Able-bodied lads, forced to take welfare aid for their families, don't want this system because it does just that—prevents them from getting back into employment and prevents them from taking seasonal employment . . . Meanwhile they stay on the welfare rolls when they might be off—and who pays? That's right! . . .

THANX TO YOU, TOO:

Try as we will, we can't figure what this has to do with us, except that it's a communication from Greece After Dark to Boston A. D. . . . Anyway, it's from a gent, in Pawtucket, about another gent (in the bucket) and it reads:

"I am inclose an article which happens for a true fact from Greece. I enjoy indulging in real news that has happen.

"It was just such luck of two fishermen to catch a shark while fishing along Kassandra Point and Halceda Peninsula. After the sea monster was cut up the fishermen found in the stomach a man's wallet, five 500 drachmas, one valuable ring and a pair shoes.

"It is believed that a man by the name Arbanitahes, a fisherman, was devoured by this shark. I wish to thank you in return." . . .

No trouble at all—compared with Arbanitahes' . . .

Laurette Taylor's 'At the Theater' Smart Comedy

By PEGGY DOYLE

Ogunquit, Me., August 4—Laurette Taylor, whose name will probably always be a synonym for "Peg O' My Heart" to American theatergoers, came back to the stage here last night in a comedy of her own fashioning.

It is titled "At the Theater," and its advance notices are sufficiently interesting to lure to its premiere at Walter Hartwig's Colony Theater a half dozen Manhattan script scouts. These represented the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer office as well as Broadway theatrical interests.

That they found Miss Taylor's play interesting several of them freely admitted.

"At the Theater," a three-act comedy, chiefly concerns Marie Sanford, Arline Ashley and Jack Bosari, all notable members of the profession that Miss Taylor has so long distinguished.

Miss Sanford, as Miss Taylor interprets her, is an excellent actress who is also a disturbingly attractive woman. She is, as she says, "A born bachelor—not an old maid."

Her long time friend and fellow thespian, Arline Ashley, is a much-married, discontented, spoiled woman who is even more temperamental off than on stage. Lillian Foster, who made the international headlines when she slapped the face of the famous London critic, Hannan Swaffer because she so thoroughly disagreed with his notion of her previous night's performance, plays Arline and misses none of the temperamental fireworks.

Bosari, handsome leading man in their company, is engaged to Arline but frankly in love with Marie Sanford.

Rehearsing a love scene with Marie with exceeding sincerity, he substitutes her name for the name in the play, telling her that what she congratulates him for as convincing acting is not acting at all—that he loves her. The tempestuous Arline, overhearing, is reduced to a frenzy of jealousy and dismay.

Stiano Braggiotti, of the celebrated Boston family of Braggiottis, plays Bosari whom Mario verbally sizes up as the kind of man who "could be dancing with a blonde close to his heart, while he was flirting with a brunette across the dance floor and all the time thinking of a redhead he would later be joining in a penthouse love nest."

Miss Taylor's play is good theater despite being slowed up by a first scene involving a bit of exhibitionism on the part of the company's apprentices. They're good, especially youthful Robin Strange, poetess Michael Strange's talented son, but Miss Taylor shouldn't have let her kind heart run away with her and halt the play's start to provide these young hopefuls a chance.

In "At The Theater" Miss Taylor, the playwright, has incorporated some of the most penetrating dialogue you'll hear in a season of playgoing, and her diction and timing give it a platinum setting.

At the Tremont

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, in their latest musical hit, "Swing-time," and Freddie Bartholomew, in "David Copperfield," make up the double feature bill on the Tremont screen today and tomorrow.

Air Mystery On Screen

"Reported Missing," Universal's new aviation mystery thriller co-starring William Gargan and Boston's own Jean Rogers, and "Armored Car," with Robert Wilcox, Judith Barrett, Cesar Romero and Irving Pichel in the leading roles, make up the new double feature program opening Friday at the RKO Boston Theater.

"Reported Missing" deals with the adventures of a young inventor who perfects a navigating device for the giant transport planes of a major airline—and then sees plane after plane, depending upon his instrument, plunge to destruction.

A new phase of the constant battle between the law and the underworld is excitingly brought forth in "Armored Car."

Temple Film To Top Twin Bills

The Shirley Temple-Victor McLaglen co-starring hit, "Wee Willie Winkie", screen version of Rudyard Kipling's famed story comes to the Paramount and Fenway screens tomorrow.

This picture, which is even more popular with adults than with youngsters, comes to the twin screens direct from a record-breaking engagement at the Metropolitan theater. It is probably one of little Missy Temple's best pictures, if not her very best, even though the brawny McLaglen, very confidentially, does steal the picture.

Set against the dangerous and mysterious background of the land of the Bengal Lancers, India's untamed frontier, the picture brings to life Kipling's glorious adventure of the Scottish Highlanders, the gallant soldiers who sacrificed their lives to carry law and order into the wild, strange world of savage, warring tribesmen.

Shirley is cast in the title role, as the little heroine who brings peace and protection to the wild frontier. McLaglen appears opposite her in the role of Sergeant McDuff, fearless fighting member of the Highlanders. Featured in support of these two stars are C. Aubrey Smith, June Lang, Michael Whalen, Cesar Romero and Douglas Scott. John Ford, Academy Award winner, directed.

Hecht Signs Contract

Sam Goldwyn the other day signed Ben Hecht up on the biggest writer contract in the industry when he guaranteed him $260,000 a year.

Hecht, former Chicago newspaperman, received $6500 a week for the job he recently did for Selznick. His new Goldwyn contract is for 52 weeks and for a term of years, in case options are lifted.

This new contract puts Hecht into the four-figure salary group which includes Anita Loos, Donald Ogden Stewart, John Emerson, Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell and Charles Bennet.

'Dead End' Boys Win Star Roles in Film

By HARRIET PARSONS

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Aug. 4—Mervyn Leroy was so impressed with the portrayals turned in by the six boys brought out from the original New York cast of "Dead End" to recreate their roles for the Samuel Goldwyn film that he is borrowing all six from Sam and will star them in "Who Asked To Be Born?"

Harriet Parsons

Story is an original by Leonardo Bercovici, who produced "Lost Boy," a play about kids, in New York several seasons ago.

Three of the boys are still here in Hollywood and the other three will return in two weeks after filling radio engagements in the East. Goldwyn lifted their options today and is loaning them to LeRoy since he has no immediate plans for them on the home lot.

Permission to use the title "Hollywood Hotel" has been granted to Jack Warner by the sponsors of that radio hour, in return for which Jack has agreed to feature an actual Orchid Room broadcast with Frances Langford, Jerry Cooper, Igor Gorin, Ann Jamison, Ken Niles, Raymond Paige—and yes—"our first lady of Hollywood," Louella Parsons.

Plan is to present some of Warners top ranking stars as Orchid Room guests. Suppose there'll be no living with L. O. P. now that she's going to turn actress.

Eager to cash in on Barbara Stanwyck's big hit in "Stella Dallas," Samuel Goldwyn is trying to borrow her from RKO again to star her in "The Girl on the Board Walk." This is the Ben Hecht-Charlie Lederer opus all about down and out vaudevillians. Sam is lining up as many of the old big time vaudeville acts as possible.

And here's a twist which may kill the deal as far as Barbara is concerned: One of the top vaudevillians for whom Goldwyn is dickering is none other than Frank Fay, Barbara's ex.

The Raymond Scott quintette, something new in the way of swing bands, came to Hollywood for a short engagement at a night spot and found themselves the object of heated studio bidding. Darryl Zanuck won out and has signed the boys to a long term contract. Darryl plans to use them in four of his musicals.

Line or Two: Jim Thorpe and Leo Fielding, who used to play opposite one another on college football teams, are both playing Chinese roles in "Marco Polo." Thorpe has quite an important part and they say he's turning into a swell actor . . . Russell Gleason becomes an official member of "The Jones Family" in the next of the series. Script calls for him to marry Shirley Deane, whom he's been courting for three episodes.

Claire Dodd, off the screen for a year being a mother to her baby son, returns with an important role in "The Women Men Marry," new title for "This Is My Wife," with George Murphy, Josephine Hutchinson and Sidney Blackmer. She replaces Gertrude Michael, who's ill again.

Snapshots of Hollywood

DICK FORAN all upset over a batch of phone calls asking him if he and the bride had separated. He wants the world to know that the frau and no one else attended the fights with him; LUPE VELEZ, testing for "Kangaroos" at RKO, gave that imitation of SHIRLEY TEMPLE which she did on the London stage and had everybody in such hysterics they're going to use it in the picture; CHESTER KITCHEN, DIXIE DUNBAR'S wealthy new boy friend, long distancing her from Atlanta, Ga., and gabbing for an hour; EDNA MAY OLIVER dashing to her dressing room between scenes to listen to the Salzburg music festival on her short wave radio set; FRANK McHUGH inviting friends to a "ventilation party" to christen that new air conditioning system he just installed in his San Fernando Valley home.

Cochrane-Grew Bridal Attracts North Shore Notables

By BETTY ALDEN

IF THE OLD ADAGE "Happy the bride the sun shines on" still holds good, Eugenie Grew should have no fault to find with married life . . . for she and Alexander Cochrane embarked upon their matrimonial career yesterday under the bluest of summer skies, with a warm, sparkling sun illuminating the stain glass windows of St. John's Church in Beverly Farms throughout the ceremony . . .

MRS. REGINALD FOSTER, JR.

At the Essex County Club, where the reception was held, the guests enjoyed the wedding breakfast at small tables set out on the wide grassy terrace, with large gayly colored umbrellas to shield them from old Sol's bright rays . . .

The reception was planned so that the guests entered the clubhouse and went immediately into the drawing room to congratulate the bridal couple and greet the Grews and Cochranes in the receiving line . . . Just beyond this room, on the terrace, waiters served them with champagne and still further along was the buffet where an array of epicurean delicacies was theirs for the asking . . . they took their plates to the little tables to sit and watch the proceedings and add their share to the steady buzz of laughter and conversation . . .

As soon as the receiving line broke up the bridesmaids followed the others out onto the terrace and looked very much like fluffy, animated dolls as they ran about greeting friends, in their shell pink organza frocks made with bouffant skirts, pleated fischus around the necklines, satin sashes and pleated organza hats tied under their chins with satin ribbons . . . contrasted with the more casual prints and summer pastels of the guests . . .

The ritual of cutting the cake and bidding a temporary farewell to all the wedding attendants went on in a smaller room off the terrace where Eugenie and Alexander, and the bridesmaids and ushers, had their wedding breakfast . . . The long table was laden with white flowers with the towering white cake in the center . . . The bride's voluminous train spread out behind her chair as she acknowledged one toast after another . . . and it almost seemed a shame for her to sit down and crush the clusters of orange blossoms which caught the lace on her cream satin skirt into graceful folds . . . The wreath of orange blossoms which held the tulle veil in place had a small triangular piece standing up over her forehead . . .

Among the relatives of the bridal couple present to extend their best wishes were Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Wheeler (Agnes Grew) and her sister, Mrs. Frederick Bruce Robinson, nieces of Mr. Grew . . . Mrs. James Denison Sawyer, aunt of the bridegroom, came over from New York to be present and looked very modish in a navy and yellow silk suit, with a pleated skirt and pleated jacket . . . She is a sister of Mrs. F. Murray Forbes, Mrs. George R. Fearing and F. Douglas Cochrane, father of the bridegroom . . . Mrs. Dudley Pickman Jr., who was formerly the wife of Mr. Cochrane's late brother, was present with her children, Lucy, Jean and Buddy Cochrane . . .

Fashionables Attend Wedding Reception

TANNED AND RUGGED-LOOKING from outdoor sports, B. H. Bristow Draper of Hopedale was a charming escort for his wife, who looked quite delicate and feminine in a rose dress with a dubonnet cape and accessories . . .

Mrs. Boylston Beale's black and white print was splashed with pink flecks and her white hat was most festive with a huge black bird swooping up over the crown . . . Her daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Hinds, and her niece, Mrs. Crosby Choate, were with her . . . Mrs. Henry Tudor, president of the Women's Republican Club, chatted about the possibilities of fair weather for the Republicans' moonlight cruise down the harbor last evening, as friends gathered around her table . . . Her grape colored gown was dotted in white to match the trimming on her black picture hat . . . Mr. and Mrs. Courtlandt Van Voorhees were there to watch their son, Standish, performing his usher duties . . . Mrs. Richard D. Sears (Eleanor M. Cochrane) another member of the family, was present with her daughter, Mrs. James Minot, Jr . . . Mrs. Augustus Goodwin, Mrs. Joseph Woods, Mrs. James Dean, Dorothea Dean and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Goodrich (he is president of the New England Conservatory of Music) were among those who attended the reception only . . .

Among the younger people strolling about from one group to another were Mr. and Mrs. Austin Osgood, the latter wearing a very Deitrich-like hat of royal blue chiffon with a long scarf draped around her throat and trailing almost to the hem of her black dress . . . Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Goodale, Ellen Moseley, and Mrs. Reginald Foster, Jr., whose coral dress had a bolero trimmed with navy embroidery . . . her hat was a novel achievement combining a navy fishnet crown with a wide brim of natural straw . . . Others who will recall the affair with pleasant memories are Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Bartlett, Charles Pierce, Mrs. Nathaniel Simpkins, Mrs. Robert Brewer, Mr. and Mrs. John Reed Post and Mrs. Richard D. Sears, Jr., whose young sons escorted her with boyish gallantry and looked very continental in navy corduroy overalls over bright yellow sweaters . . .

The bride and groom are taking a leisurely cruise in their yacht, after which they will spend some time at the Grews' summer home in Manchester . . .

Frederick Ayers Entertain at Dinner

THERE WAS A PLEASANT and congenial combination of old and young guests at the large dinner party Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ayer of Ledyard Farm, Hamilton, gave last Saturday evening to welcome Lieutenant-Colonel and Mrs. George S. Patton, Jr., back into the North Shore circle . . . The Pattons, who are brother-in-law and sister of Mr. Ayer, have been stationed in Honolulu for two years, so were more than elated to renew old friendships at the dinner party . . . Their daughter, Ruth Ellen, was right in her glory when surrounded by a number of friends of Anne and Freddy Ayer, who were invited to the party also . . .

All sorts of celebrations will take place the evening of August 14 to commemorate the end of 1937's Race Week at Marblehead, which is generally the gayest and busiest weekk of the whole season on the North Shore . . . Already formal invitations have been issued by Mr. and Mrs. E. Sohier Welch of Manchester, for a dinner party that evening at their summer home . . .

BRILLIANT WEDDING ON NORTH SHORE

by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"He's lovely to me when we're alone, but he belittles me before company," writes an unhappy young wife who, in addition to caring for an 18-months-old baby, does all her own housework.

She washes and irons—even the belittling husband's shirts. She cooks so well that her cake has taken a prize at the county fair, and her house is as neat as a pin.

Still, friend husband waits till he gets an audience, and then makes fun of her.

She dreads to see one of her own family, any in-law or even a neighbor drop in, for whenever this happens the fun is on for the husband.

Six months ago, while she was wheeling the baby home from the chain store with the groceries packed in his carriage, the little fellow threw out a two-pound package of sugar. The loss of the sugar, costing 12 cents, has rankled for half a year.

"MARITAL ROUGHNECK"

There is also the stock-in-trade joke about her biscuit; he "doesn't go swimming the day she has them for breakfast." He refers to the neat muslin curtains as "window rags," and when a pair of candles were lighted in honor of glass candlesticks, given by his favorite sister as a wedding present, he referred to them as "greasestick holders."

If she answers back, he calls her a "marital roughneck."

The woman has lost heart, she cares nothing now about her house, which used to be her "pride and joy."

When people come, she sits in a corner and waits for the next hand grenade to be thrown. She wants to put the baby in a day nursery, and accept a job a friend has offered—in a boarding house, as assistant manager—but the baby is the question.

Will the husband give him up?

Now, mental specialists (psychiatrist" is such an unwieldy word) have diagnosed the cases of these belittling males to a gnat's heel.

THE REAL REASON

Nature has supplied these lesser partners with "inferiority compensation" and they nag and belittle before people, to put themselves right before their little world, consisting of relatives, in-laws and acquaintances.

But, it seems to me, any woman with this problem on her hands might get a lot of fun out of establishing a "cure for belittling husbands" at home.

WHEN HE BRINGS OUT THE BISCUIT JOKE, STOP BAKING BISCUITS AND LET HIM EAT COLD BAKER'S BREAD.

Present him with the 12 cents lost when junior threw away the sugar.

Take down the curtains and let him see how grim an unshaded room looks, and sweetly return the candlesticks to his sister, saying her brother disapproves of "grease-sticks."

If a woman can make a game of this, and not let it break her spirit, she won't have to put her baby in a nursery and take a job as assistant manager of a boarding house.

WHATEVER HAPPENS, DON'T LET LIFE BREAK YOUR SPIRIT. IT'S GOD'S SPECIAL GIFT TO YOU.

What do you know of "belittling husbands?"

MADGE SHOCKED AT LESLIE'S NEWS

CHAPTER 371

FOR AN instant I was too shocked for speech at Dicky's statement that one of the persons to whom Jack Leslie had addressed letters from his jail cell was Philip Veritzen.

"Dicky!" I ejaculated incredulously as soon as I could find my voice, "surely my ears are playing me tricks! You couldn't have said—"

"I said that one of the persons to whom the capering cockroach has written is Philip Veritzen, Esquire, and I repeat it, none other than foxy old Phil himself."

"But — but — what does it mean?" I asked, bewildered, then went on with growing vehemence. "He must have been writing just for a bluff. I can't believe Phil Veritzen is sponsoring Jack Leslie, or that he is back of the malevolent attempt to find Mary."

Dicky flashed a queerly curious look at me.

"Pipe down, old dear!" he admonished. "No need of getting all steamed up over something perfectly obvious, or of defending him so frantically. Use the common sense your friends—sometimes erroneously, I admit—believe you to possess. If the capering cockroach had been backed by old Phil, he would have known that Mary is now Mrs. Noel Veritzen, and he would have known her whereabouts."

RECALLS JEALOUSY

I paid little attention just then to the last part of Dicky's diatribe. The words registered almost subconsciously on my memory, to be answered later. It was the odd intonation investing his first words which intrigued me, and made me remember my husband's old jealousy of Philip Veritzen.

But I realized in that instant that a husband's jealousy of some former admirer of his wife is never reduced to dead ashes.

"I'm not defending him," I said. "I believe him to be unscrupulous, and I'd like to boil him in oil for what he's doing to Noel and Mary. But it seems incredible to think he has lowered himself to the point of being associated with Jack Leslie in any plot against Mary."

"It is incredible," Dicky said, and I knew by his tone that I had exorcised the demon of jealousy almost as quickly as it had appeared. "And I don't believe it any more than you do. So where do we go from there?"

"But why is he writing?" I persisted.

"Ah! that is something else again," Dicky said speculatively. "There are several reasons why he might be writing to Veritzen."

He paused, and I put the query that he evidently expected.

"What reasons?" I said with a purposely doubtful intonation.

"Well, for one, he may be trying a little blackmail."

ONCE EMPLOYED HIM

Yes, blackmail," Dicky repeated, "Don't you remember how strong were our suspicions that Philip Veritzen, though having reason to lathe Leslie, and who was regarded by the capering cockroach as a hated enemy, had employed the creature in a dastardly plot to discredit Mary so thoroughly that Noel would give her up?"

"Yes, I remember," I said. "But I remember also that we all were sure Philip Veritzen was not mentally responsible at the time."

"Responsible mentally!" Dicky gibed. "He was crazy as the insect we don't mention in polite society. But that wouldn't prevent that other insect from an attempt to blackmail Veritzen into helping him escape prison bars.

"Now it doesn't matter a hoot to me, nor I think to you, how much blackmail Veritzen pays or doesn't pay, but the fact that Leslie is attempting it, and, therefore, has some connection with Veritzen, does matter in another direction, that of Noel and Mary and I must get busy about that, pronto."

South Shore Fetes Next Week

Philanthropy to the fore even in vacation times is the slogan on the South Shore, for high-minded summer colonists clustered at the resorts have planned three novel parties for the next week with underprivileged children, the beneficiary of each.

A moonlight sail, a mid-summer frolic and a more formal supper dance are the varied benefits scheduled. Captain Alfred H. Brown the charity-conscious pilot of the Town of Hull, launches his boat a week from tonight for the benefit of the Vacation House at Sunset Point. He's undertaking the Catholic charitable benefit single-handed.

The good-will ship sails from Boston at 8, picks up passengers at Pemberton at 8:30 and will return just before the witching hour.

Rita Buckley, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Buckley of Green Hill in North Cohasset, has planned numerous novelties for the mid-summer soiree she's holding tonight at the Municipal building in Hull. Vacation House likewise benefits from this undertaking.

Cecilian Guild girls will doff their beach attire and don some glamorous summer finery for their August benefit, a supper dance Friday night at the Pemberton Inn.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Smith, the latter is chairman of the event, will entertain many guests at the party, Mrs. and Mrs. Thomas J. Lavalle, Mr. and Mrs. James Dowd of Holyoke, who are summering at Scituate, and Neal O'Callaghan and Betty Cunningham.

Others who have made reservations for the party which aids the guild's charity work are Dr. and Mrs. Harold V. Nash, Frank Welch, Mr. and Mrs. Guido Rugo and Adolphe Joanett.

Morris-McCarney Bridal Saturday

NEXT SATURDAY morning has been chosen by Marguerite Morris as the day of her wedding to Thomas Francis McCarney of Newark, N. J. The ceremony, to be performed at 9 o'clock in St. Patrick's Church, will be followed by a breakfast and reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Morris.

Mr. Morris will give his daughter in marriage and Alice Morris will be her sister's only attendant.

Best man will be Frank McCarney of Jamaica Plain. Serving as ushers will be James McCarney of Newark, N. J., and William Morris, Jr., of Watertown.

Following the reception, the couple will leave on a motor tour of New Hampshire and Canada and will make their home in Newark, N. J.

Among the parties preceding Saturday's nuptials was the buffet supper at which Mrs. William Morris, mother of the bride, and Mrs. Edward Kelley acted as hostesses. Among their guests were Gladys Healey, Ellen Greeley, Mrs. Catherine Kerrigan, Isabella Kenna, Alice Kelley and Mrs. Mary McLuceas, who also entertained at her home in honor of the future bride.

Miss Morris, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Morris, is active in the Massachusetts Women's Catholic Guild.

Jean Sears Is Bride in Beverly

Miss Jean Sears, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry F. Sears of Beverly Cove and Boston, and sister-in-law of Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, became the bride of Archibald Stevens Alexander of Bernardsville, N. J., yesterday afternoon, at a quiet outdoor ceremony which was marked by simplicity and restraint.

The broad green terrace facing the ocean formed a lovely background for the bride, who wore a gown of white organza, made in medieval style and trimmed with old Valenciennes lace.

The Right Rev. Philip H. Rhinelander, retired bishop of Pennsylvania, performed the ceremony and Dr. Sears gave his daughter in marriage. There were no bridal attendants. James Barney of New York, uncle of the bridegroom, was the best man.

Attendance at the ceremony was restricted to members of the immediate families. Among those present were Senator Lodge and Mrs. Lodge, the former Miss Emily Sears, sister of the bride, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sears, brother and sister-in-law of the bride. An informal reception followed the ceremony.

The bride attended school in Paris and is a member of both the Junior League of Boston and the exclusive Chilton Club. Mr. Alexander, who is the son of the late Archibald Alexander of Bernardsville, and Mrs. Helen Barney Watriss, prepared for college at St. Paul's, graduated from Princeton and from the Harvard Law School. He is a member of the Knickerbocker Club in New York.

Following a honeymoon trip through Europe, Mr. Alexander and his bride will make their home in the old family mansion in Bernardsville which was given him by his grandmother, the late Mrs. Henry Otte Wittpenn.

Debs to Aid At Tea

Ellen Moseley, Elizabeth Osborne and Faith Kidder, three of the season's debutantes, are among the girls who will serve tea at the summer sale which will be held by the Women's Educational and Industrial Union tomorrow and Friday at Candlewood Barn in Ipswich.

Nancy Burrage, Charlotte Rantoul, Dorothy Preston, Elizabeth Mason, Patricia Preston, and Mrs. Edward T. Buxton, Jr., will also help with the tea which will be served from four o'clock until half past five. The sale, of homemade gifts and handiwork, will be open all day both Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. Samuel Cabot and Mrs. Harold G. Cutler are in charge and will be assisted by members of the Union's handwork, needlework and food shop committees.

What Has Happened:

It was bad enough when Toni Goddard's father became bankrupt, but when her fiance, the so[illegible] prominent Brock M[illegible]bank, eloped with Jessica Payne, it was [illegible] more than she could bear.

However, the homely philosophy of an old fisherman gives Toni hope. He compared [illegible] to a fisherman's net which, though torn, is mended and put to sea again adding "There's healing in work!"

So Toni goes to New York in search of work. Weeks pass and she finds none. Then one day Bridget, an old apple vendor, suggests that Toni try for the [illegible] New [illegible] Cassie. Toni fibs to Cassie that [illegible] mother, in Cincinnati, sent her. She gets the job.

The night before she is [illegible] she watches the performance. A dark handsome man [illegible] at her. Toni repulses the advances of [illegible] Gusheim, her director. She now lives with Cassie. One evening she meets her [illegible] boy friend, Herman, whom she recognizes as the man who sold her a fox neck piece and then substituted a disreputable looking cat fur for it.

CHAPTER NINE

Days went by. One evening she ventured into Dave's Blue Room, hoping an opportunity might be given her to sing there.

But before she could make her request to the manager, he recognized her and said quickly:

"Mr. Niklas has been [illegible] for you. We [illegible] touch with Mr. G[illegible] he said he d[illegible] we could [illegible] let you [illegible] the Casino [illegible] Mr. N[illegible] wants [illegible] number."

He gave [illegible]

"Who," asked Toni faintly, "is Mr. Niklas? And why does he want me?"

"He heard you sing here that night. He was the sallow-faced man in the corner who applauded. He's one of the richest and most important night-club men on Broadway.

"He can make you or break you. My advice is for you to get in touch with Mr. Niklas immediately," the manager urged her.

A RAY OF HOPE

Over [illegible] was the [illegible] assessed Toni [illegible] eyes.

"I have sent for you"—his voice was extraordinarily soft and gentle—"because it is my belief that I can fit you importantly into a night club I am opening shortly."

"Yes?"

"The work," said Mr. Niklas, drumming beautifully manicured fingers upon the desk, "requires discretion. Poise. Above all class.

"When I heard you sing in Dave's Blue Room, it was the last two qualities that interested me. In addition, of course, to your voice."

[illegible]

"You are new to Broadway? To its ways?"

[illegible]

"Completely new, yes."

"Ah, that is very good." [illegible]

How long have you been in the city, Miss [illegible] "Miss Goddard."

"Only a few weeks, Mr. Niklas."

"Your first visit to New York?"

[illegible] "Yes."

SHE CONFESSES

Annoyed [illegible]

"I am from San Francisco. My people lost all their money. I came East, hoping to get a job as a writer. Sublime optimist!" she added, smiling wryly.

"But, you have traveled? You have—pardon me!—the air."

"I studied in Paris two years. Also, I've been to the Orient."

"You have an excellent French accent. Just like a native."

"I had French governesses from the time I was a tot. And [illegible] after her [illegible] employment agencies—"I majored in French as well as in English literature at college."

"So? That gives me an idea. And you have no relatives, no friends, no ties here in New York? On your way to and from Paris—"

"By the Canal route," she finished [illegible] "I know no one in this city." [illegible] at what was [illegible]

"You were a showgirl in the New Gallic Casino, I understand?"

SHE'S A LADY

[illegible] "That Gusheim, he is—please forgive the word—a scoundrel."

[illegible]

He thought: "She has a beautiful smile. She's a lady. We could turn her into a beauty. No ties, no friends. Excellent! She could be an A1 drawing card. We could recreate her."

[illegible]

"At college, did you study psychology, Miss Goddard? A knowledge of people, how to please them, win their confidence—in fact, find out all about them is immensely important in this business."

"The night club business?" she asked.

"The part I shall require you to play in night-club life." [illegible]

"Discretion. Shall I say, a sixth sense that informs one who is important, and who isn't?"

She said, honestly: "But I know no one in New York."

"With your social background, the experience that travel must have given you, Miss Goddard, you will readily separate what I may call the sheep from the goats! You will attract the rich, important clients to our premises that are ah!—so beautiful!"

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

FEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month.

You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. If you're wise and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Sweet Corn IS AT IT'S Finest

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

A SENTENCE in an agricultural bulletin caught our eye the other day. It read like this: "From mid-July until fall the real sweet corn is available. By the first of August it will be at its height, and around mid-August it will likely be at its cheapest."

Translated into local market news that means "now" and the price ranges from 25 to 50 cents a dozen depending upon the quality.

SWEET CORN is rapidly displacing its humbler predecessor, green field corn usually called "roasting ears" for June's fresh corn is nothing more or less than early field corn, grown for roasting ears. Most of us Americans are so hungry for corn on the cob that the first ears on the market set our mouths to watering and our otherwise critical taste is banished until a later date.

It is well to remember when buying corn that no other vegetable is [illegible] as sweet corn. Not many of us [illegible] in the garden and pick the corn in order that it can go from the garden to the pot without delay, so we have to learn how to judge the fresh ears in the markets.

Both sweet corn and roasting ears should be [illegible] and tender, with [illegible] kernels just firm enough to offer slight resistance to pressure [illegible] have an alive [illegible].

IF EITHER type corn is too immature the kernels will be [illegible] small, soft and flavorless. If it is too mature the change [illegible] content to a doughy [illegible] has begun and the kernels are tough.

You can usually tell the sweet corn from the field corn by the husks [illegible] sweet corn husks often end in small blades which hang free in ribbon like ends.

The Red Man who taught us to grow corn also taught us to eat [illegible] on the cob so we [illegible] napkins under [illegible] and go the Indian one better by adding butter and salt to bring out the [illegible] flavor of the plump corn kernels.

Whether or not it is to be eaten on the cob it is more tender and [illegible] of flavor if cooked like this: Simmer the corn ears in salted water. Don't boil it rapidly. Don't use a large quantity of water and don't overcook.

WHEN the corn is done, if you wish cut the kernels from the cob, add seasoning—and if you like, some cream. If you are serving it on the cob, it will look more attractive and stay hot longer if you place it on the table covered with a napkin, as [illegible] would hot rolls.

After the novelty of corn-on-the-cob has worn off you will want to fix it in a different way. And you will certainly want to put up some corn relish.

CORN AND PEPPER RAMEKINS

- 2 cups corn
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ½ cup milk
- 1 chopped pimienta
- 1 teaspoon butter
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- 1 green pepper
- 1 cup bread crumbs

Chop the pepper and pimiento and add to the corn with the sugar, salt, pepper and milk. Fill greased ramekins one-third full, sprinkle with layers of fine bread-crumbs, then put in another layer of corn, continue until the dishes are filled, having crumbs on top. Dot over each ramekin with butter, using one-half teaspoon for each. Bake in a 500 F. oven for 12 minutes. Serves five.

CORN FRITTERS

- 2 or 3 ears of corn
- ⅓ cup flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1 egg beaten
- 2 tablespoons minced parsley
- Salt and pepper

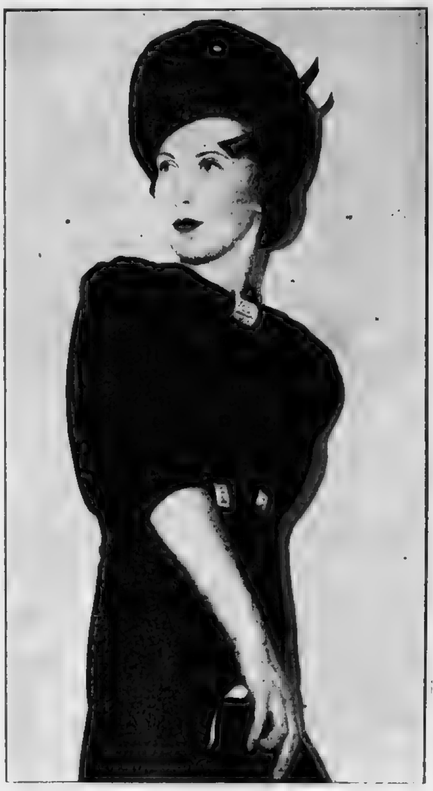
Scrape the kernels from the ears. Sift flour, baking powder, and salt. Add the egg, seasonings and corn. Beat thoroughly. Drop from a spoon on a hot greased griddle or into deep hot fat. If the corn is not juicy, add a tablespoon of milk.

TOMATO AND CORN SALAD

- 6 medium-sized tomatoes
- 2 cups fresh cooked corn
- 2 seeded green peppers, chopped
- 1 cup cream, whipped
- 2 tablespoons salad oil
- 6 ripe olives
- 2 tablespoons vinegar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ⅛ teaspoon pepper
- ⅛ teaspoon paprika
- 1 bunch watercress or lettuce

Dip the tomatoes into boiling water. Then slip off the skins and hollow out the tomatoes to form cups. Sprinkle inside with salt and pepper and chill. Meanwhile add the salad oil, vinegar, salt, pepper and paprika to the whipped cream and then fold in the corn and chopped green pepper. Fill the tomato with this mixture and top each with a ripe olive. Arrange one stuffed tomato on individual beds of watercress or lettuce and serve as a main dish. Serves six.

Flair of Fall



SALUTE to the newest autumn hats! They're brisk as a flag in a whipping breeze, and even the stand-by beret can go flaring off at a very dramatic tangent if it chooses. Here is a very smooth and sophisticated little crepe and satin frock which subtly points up the daring pleated felt beret. There's some quietly smart draping done with satin, swathed around the waist, around the neckline and dropping from the shoulders. At intervals there are brilliant clips. And the color is one of the new deep wines, called "Chambertin burgundy." The beret is black felt with an extreme upward and onward movement. "Your Figure, Madame!"

SUMMER SLUMP IS HARD ON BEST OF FIGURES

By IDA JEAN KAIN

AUGUST is the month to remodel your curves for autumn. As you drift through the late summer days, you are not actively concerned about a few extra pounds here and there—but you will be when fall comes to town. Three months of lazy living can ruin the best of figures.

If you really swim you won't have any figure worries this fall, for swimming strengthens, slims and mends your posture. It smooths you down in some spots and builds you up in others. In fact, it makes all the muscles behave beautifully.

But most of you don your lovely swim-suits—and don't go near the water! If you insist on staying high and dry on the beach you can make it up to your figure with exercise.

Try going around in circles on the beach—it's good exercise! Stretch yourself face down at full length weight supported on the palms of the hands, and elbows and knees straight. Now, "walk" sideways on your toes pivoting on the hands, until you make a complete circle. Take long side steps.

Stand erect, feet together and hands down at the sides. For exercise leap into the air, flinging the arms to shoulder level from the sides, and kicking sideward with one foot. Repeat the exercise, alternating legs for the side kick. Keep both knees straight, and kick to a right angle if possible.

A vigorous variation of the foregoing exercise is to jump into the air with knees straight, and throw both legs sideward, arms going up as you leave the ground. Come down with the feet together.

These exercises are good for whatever ails your figure, and especially for hips, thighs and tummy. If you are having waistline trouble, however, add this to the set.

MOVEMENT: Bend and twist at the waist to place the palm of the left hand on the outer side of the right foot. Swing up, flinging the left arm backward and twisting the body forcibly at the waist. Repeat the exercise ten times with this position, then reverse the [illegible] and perform with the [illegible] arm in back of body, right arm swinging.

If you will take just these three exercises and do them every single day, your figure will be as slim and trim as you could wish—provided, of course, your weight is not too far beyond the range of normal. While fall may be 30 degrees away by the thermometer, it's only about 30 days before you will be wearing the sleek-fitting clothes that demand streamlines.

For your fall figure, practice the "Spot Exercises for Symmetry." You may obtain this leaflet by writing to this paper and enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope to Miss Ida Jean Kain.

Proper Care May Curb Stroke

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

CEREBRAL hemorrhage, more commonly known as "stroke" or apoplexy, is an alarming and serious affair.

I am frequently asked whether a stroke causes permanent paralysis. Often I am asked whether stroke is the result of high blood pressure. Others inquire whether this emergency is not only in elderly persons.

In [illegible] answer these questions [illegible] to explain the [illegible] of apoplexy. As a [illegible] in those who [illegible] high blood pressure [illegible] the arteries. But it may be caused by other conditions such as heart disease, tumor of the brain, tuberculosis or some other condition. The amount of hemorrhage as well as the location of the ruptured blood vessel determines the extent of injury and the degree of paralysis.

The victim of cerebral hemorrhage may suffer from complete paralysis of one side of the body. This is called "hemiplegia" and may involve the entire half of the body, including one side of the face, one arm and leg and one side of the trunk. If the legs and trunk alone are involved, the [illegible] is called paraplegia. Monoplegia is a paralysis of a single extremity, the leg or arm.

MANY ESCAPE

It must be borne in mind, too, that many victims of cerebral hemorrhage escape paralysis, or if they have paralysis, it is of an extremely mild and temporary in its nature. These are fortunate persons because, if they heed the warning, they will escape further attacks and avoid serious paralysis at a latter time.

Paralysis due to cerebral hemorrhage is not always permanent. Certain factors determine the extent of the injury. Whether the paralysis is permanent or temporary can only be decided after close observation of the patient for several days. The doctor who is familiar with the case often can determine the seriousness of the paralysis.

NOURISH COMPLEXION TO NEW YOUTH

Be Sure Cream Suits Your Need

By ARLINE GOULD

THERE'S nothing quite like the mid-season to wreak havoc and devastation on that long-suffering area—the face. Things crescendo to a pitch that takes toll of the youngest skins . . . blasts of hot air or shafts of icy wind doing just the same amount of dirty work.

It's no news to you who follow this column that lines and wrinkles and roughness can be fought only by soothing unguents and oils.

If you wage a good fight you can [illegible] . . . and you can take our word for it, who've [illegible] [illegible] to [illegible] than 30th [illegible] and [illegible]

But you have to use the same [illegible] that has taken off the 2[illegible] years in the special case we've mentioned.

We have found nourishing creams [illegible] made by one discoverer which take care of three essentially different types of skin. And you will find yourself [illegible] one of them.

It is no longer necessary for the desert-dry complexion to find nourishment in the same scented jar the opposite type dips into.

Hold Up at a Trump Contract

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The hold-up play is so useful at notrump that few players realize that it can be used to great advantage at a trump contract.

Its main purpose at notrump is to prevent the establishment, or cashing, of a long suit.

At trump contracts, the purpose of the hold-up is generally to save one trick rather than a whole suit. The value of this all-important play at trump contracts is shown in today's hand.

N.E. BOY SCOUTS ENJOY TRIP TO HOLLAND

By EMILE HAJAR

With the New England Boy Scouts, the World Jamboree, Holland, July 26—The New England contingent to the Boy Scout World Jamboree in Holland left Boston on July 17. When we boarded the Scythia we were greeted with shouts, the rattling of chains and all the noise that goes with a departing ship.

At 9 10 p. m. we left the Cunard docks and sailed down the harbor. At 10 30 p. m. the Northern Light drew alongside and took off the pilots. That was our last link with home.

It wasn't long before the scouts got into the routine of life on board ship We found that two groups of scouts—21 from Washington, D C, and 13 from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico had boarded the boat at New York

QUOITS CHAMP

These units joined with the New England scouts to participate in all activities aboard the boat Scout Sam Burchiel of Pawtucket won the quoits throwing contest and Scout Leslie Walheimer of New Haven won second prize for men in the fancy dress ball.

On several nights the Scouts held campfires on deck or in the lounge Karl Woodward of Durham N H was chosen song leader and Everett Gould of Newton was made a cheer leader Songs, cheers and patrol stunts or skits were put on as part of the program

The passengers enjoyed it almost as much as the scouts themselves.

Ernest Gould Bob Bittenbinder and Jimmy Bierer all of Newton, were a trio that entertained at many functions. They particularly shone when they sang "Mrs. Murphy's Chowder" at the ship's concert

The officers of the ship have been very kind and helpful. They arranged that every boy should make a tour of the ship so that the engine rooms could be seen and its mechanism explained

ALL IN GOOD HEALTH

The crew have become our friends Old salts have given their spare time to teach the boys how to splice rope tie tricky knots and to tell us of their travels and adventures. The stewards have become our bosom pals They cater to our every wish. If Johnny wants two crackers he gets three .

Robert Boyajian of Cambridge has found among the stewards an 'Uncle George' one of the wittiest and friendliest Englishmen on the boat

The food is delicious. When we realize we don't have to wash dishes, the food tastes twice as good.

The spirit, health and morale of the group is excellent Those two weeks at Washington made us "physically fit"

In proof here is an interesting fact Not more than five boys out of 70 were missing from a meal because of sickness. Not one boy was really seasick. As a group of Boy Scouts we are swell sailors

WATCH FOR LAND

The afternoon of Saturday July 24 was spent on the forward deck looking for land The high cliffs and hills surrounding the Bay of Galway were a welcome sight They were sighted at about 9 p m The thing that all the boys commented on was the fact that the sun did not set until 10 30

Then a beautiful full moon drifted out from behind the Irish hills and seemed to light the scene for our benefit

The boys were allowed to stay awake until 1 30 a. m. Sunday morning so they could see how passengers and baggage were transferred to a lighter which met us in the bay.

The leaders allowed this because they thought it would interest the boys Needless to say, nobody was up for breakfast.

LAWE GIVES TALKS

There has been one rule that the boys had to obey to the letter They have to be in bed with lights out at 11 p m. The leaders feel that eight hours sleep is necessary

Dr Harold T. Lawe of Newport assistant scoutmaster of Troop One gave a series of talks on "The Background of American History" In these talks he told us what we were to see in our travels and how it ties in with our American history.

He will continue these talks throughout the trip He was so good that the passengers requested him to address them on the same subject He is well fitted for the task being superintendent of schools in Newport

Monday July 26 we finally landed in Liverpool After passing through customs which was an experience to most we boarded a train for Leamington Spa From there we go by bus to Warwick where we will spend the night.

Philadelphia, Aug. 4 (AP) — A man booked as Benjamin Jones [illegible] Negro, was held here today on a charge of attacking 15 young girls.

Detective Captain James Ryan arrested Jones in an investigation of more than 30 complaints from the Robin Hood Dell section that girls 11 to 15 years old had been molested

Tall Corn Auto Peril

Clinton, Ia.—Clinton County corn has reached such a height that Sheriff C. S. Petersen broadcast a warning to all drivers to proceed with 'extreme caution"

Intersections of roads and lanes are the most hazardous traffic zones in the country and the corn is growing taller every day, completely obstructing vision, the sheriff said.

HARVARD JOINS BATTLE OVER FOUR WILLS

Harvard University today was preparing to fight over the wills of the late Francis W. Adams, a retired lawyer, who, in two documents, gave the bulk of his $160,000 estate to the president and fellows of the college

The university, however, will object to two other wills, one leaving two-thirds of the estate about $100,000, to Henry Gordon Thistle, a masseur

This is believed to be the first time that Harvard has caused an appearance of counsel to be entered, objecting to the allowance of a will because of being omitted in a subsequent will as a legatee

The final or fourth will—in point of execution, filed some days ago, leaves the bulk of the estate to a brother attorney, Jesse Crooke, of Boston

Attorney Adams died July 11 The gift in the two wills in which Harvard is named is stated to be for the purpose of providing scholarships for needy students

The will leaving Thistle two thirds of the estate and one third to Mary A Dwyer for many years a housekeeper for Adams was the second will in point of time but the last of the four to be filed in court

The firm of Hutchins and Wheeler have filed an appearance to determine which will shall be allowed

Attorney Thistle has petitioned the court to appoint former Governor Joseph B. Ely as special administrator pending outcome of the litigation

N. Y. Called World Style Center

New York, Aug. 4 (AP)—Paris is losing to New York its reputation as the world fashion center said Hendrik A Both of Rotterdam today when he arrived to buy clothing for his women's dress store.

"There is a great demand in Europe for American dresses" he said "Hollywood has had a definite influence on women's styles in Europe, but the big style center of the world is New York, which is threatening Paris in the fashion field"

Amherst Expert Finds Secret of Lens

Woods Hole, Aug. 4—The first step in growing a new eye in an adult animal is reported here by Dr E O Schotte of Amherst College in The Collecting Net

He changed a bit of a newt's tail into a crystalline lens. Newts are a species of salamander. These newts were adults a fact which adds to the impressiveness of the achievement

"Newts have the ability to grow new tails when the old ones are cut off. But they never grow new eyes

PLAN CAMPBELL SCHOLARSHIP

As a memorial to Dr. Patrick T. Campbell, late superintendent of schools, a scholarship will be established under the auspices of the Boston Latin School Association it was announced today

Campbell was former president of the Latin School Association and headmaster of Latin school. A vote to establish the scholarship was taken at the May meeting of the association and the committee in charge hopes to raise $15,000

"The committee in charge is confident that the response will be commensurate with the affection in which Mr Campbell has been held by all Latin school men

"It is not merely an obligation on all of us to contribute to this scholarship fund, it is rather a privilege and an opportunity to express our appreciation of a great teacher and leader"

IT'S SWELL TO FEEL SWELL!

To guard your health demand Fresh cigarettes

And O.Gs Taste Swell, Too When hot winds blow from the East, most cigarettes get dry as dust. But that Old Gold package is a perfect [illegible] breaker. Old Golds always taste swell to me.
Betty Ba[illegible], Spokane, Wash.

Fresh as Bossy's Milk We live so far from town we have to fetch out several cartons of smokes at once and until you put that double wrapping on Old Golds we had quite a time keeping any cigarettes from getting dried out and stale. Pa says Double-Mellow Old Golds taste just as fresh and rich and wholesome as Bossy's milk

YOU CAN'T BUY A STALE OLD GOLD

YOU KNOW WHAT this tricky midsummer weather does to cigarettes. When it's muggy, your smokes go soggy. When it's hot and dry, your cigarettes taste just that way.

But the "dog-days" don't bother Double-Mellow Old Golds. That double-wrapped Old Gold package is like an air-conditioning plant. It laughs at the weather. It keeps O.Gs in the pink of smoking condition, regardless of heat or humidity.

BIRTH CONTROL DOCTOR HELD

THIS IS LIFE

By

Robert E. Rogers

Out in south-western Ohio there is a little college community named Oxford, where during the past week-end thousands of members of the federated McGuffey Societies gathered, to celebrate the centenary of the McGuffey third and fourth grade readers

ROBERT E. ROGERS

Last summer, about this time, I wrote in this column of having received from Henry Ford a set of the replicas he had had made of the original McGuffey readers. There were the elementary spellers and primer, then a series of graded spelling books up to the Fifth and Sixth, which a hundred years ago usually ended the pupils' progress in the little red schoolhouse

In the old schoolhouse near the Wayside Inn, Sudbury, Mass., stands the school which Mary of "Mary's Little Lamb" fame attended. It is now owned by Henry Ford and restored with desks and benches, wood stove, water bucket, and all the other paraphenalia of the old country school.

McGuffey Tradition Fails to Stem New England

Here also are sets of the McGuffey Readers replicas—the originals, of course, are too rare and valuable—and here, too, other examples of the school books of a bygone age.

The federated McGuffey Society must be something like the existing Charles Townsend Copeland Alumni Society, with its headquarters at the Harvard Club of New York, an organization devoted to the memory of the famous "Copey" of Harvard and made up exclusively of his former pupils. Similarly, this other organization is devoted to fostering the memory of a single person, the man whose reading books sold by the hundreds of thousands and formed the basis of the education of millions of boys and girls in English and literature.

For over half a century the McGuffey books were an important part of the education of the years from 1840 to the end of the century—everywhere except in New England. The McGuffey tradition stems from the middle west and the south, not these parts.

In a most interesting chapter in Mark Sullivan's "Our Times," the first volume, the noted author and journalist points out exactly where lay the importance of the McGuffey tradition in American elementary education. It apparently lay in the character of McGuffey.

I have seen somewhere a little woodcut depicting the flock of young boys and girls sitting about in a kind of informal school class out of doors under the trees. In the center stands a young boy in bob-tailed jacket and nankeen breeches, just like little Rollo in the famous Abbott books of that series—reading aloud. In one corner, book in hand, is the famous Dr. McGuffey, looking, it strikes me, a bit stern and pedagogical, listening intently and (apparently) correcting the boy's diction.

That was the way the boys and girls of half a century ago were taught to read aloud properly with due attention to pronunciation and enunciation, accent, pauses, and general reading efficiency.

I make no doubt that the boys and girls of 75 years ago could read aloud better, more clearly and more intelligently than those boys and girls I have dealt with nowadays at the age when supposedly they are ready to enter college. Slow, deliberate, conscientious, repetitive practice is the answer. Today we do not have it.

The other part of the story is that McGuffey was not only a pious man but one interested in character forming by the habitual use of examples.

Honesty, Thrift, Temperance Strong Notes of Teaching

Honesty, industry, thrift were the strong notes of his teaching. Benevolence, loyalty, gratitude were inculcated, too. Kindness to animals, not as common a part of education then as it is today, were emphasized. Temperance, with a strong dose of prohibition, was considered equally important. Law, order, duty and restraint, obedience, discipline, were as necessary to McGuffey as they were to Rudyard Kipling.

And patriotism of the older, unquestioning sort, was never forgotten. These formed the basis of most of the reading in American common school education. Three generations of boys and girls had, day by day, inculcated in them such principles.

It was no wonder that Mark Sullivan considers that McGuffey formed the character and morals for a long period in these United States.

FREE IN $500 BAIL

Here is blonde young Dr. Illia Galleani leaving Brookline district court today, after pleading not guilty to a charge of violating the state's anti-birth control statute. She furnished bail of $500 and was released, pending a continued hearing August 19. Arraignment of Dr. Galleani followed a police raid on a Brookline branch office of the Birth Control League of Massachusetts.

BAIL Set at $500

ENTERS PLEA OF 'NOT GUILTY'

Dr. Illia Galleani, in charge of the Brookline birth control clinic which was raided by police, pleaded not guilty in Brookline court today before Judge Philip S. Parker to a warrant charging her with violation of the birth control statute

The physician was released in $500 cash bail furnished by herself after the case was continued until August 19.

Dr. Galleani who was accompanied by her counsel and two women friends had previously made arrangements with the Brookline police to appear and accept service of the warrant in the corridor of the court this morning

Meanwhile in municipal court Judge Charles L. Carr postponed until tomorrow the issuance of warrants to police officers of the Back Bay and Milk street stations in connection with the raiding of two clinics in Boston yesterday.

Operating with lightning swiftness police last night closed Boston's first clinic at 496 Massachusetts avenue near Tremont street South End and then struck a sudden [illegible] at the heart of the movement in this state by raiding the headquarters of the Birth Control League of Massachusetts at 3 J[illegible] street.

BARRED FROM SAFE

There Mrs Leslie D. Hawkridge president of the league, which is sponsored in this state by a roll call of the socially and intellectually prominent leaders, permitted the police to seize whatever birth control literature they could find but flatly refused to permit them to inspect the safe and the filing cabinets.

They were tightly locked and she warned that she would not permit the police to open the safe and files until they could produce a search warrant. A search warrant was sought today together with complaints against the three women attendants found at the Massachusetts avenue clinic, as well as against President Hawkridge and Mrs. Caroline L. Carter Davis educational director of the league in a movement to settle the birth control issue here.

UP TO COURTS

Mrs. Hawkridge told Lieutenant Bernard Graham who led the raid that she would welcome the investigation and the court action if it would settle the question of the alleged legality of disseminating birth control information here.

Plans were immediately prepared to close up the three remaining clinics in the state and place the issue before the courts.

"We will gladly welcome this investigation, which we hope will clarify the Massachusetts law," Mrs. Hawkridge said "We have no intention of breaking the law, and we having to hide. We have never denied that we have contraceptive advice, for we consider that a doctor has the right to do what he can to preserve the life of his patients."

AID SICK WOMEN

The present law she said was enacted when little or no information on the subject was available in this country. She believes it is ambiguous and designed to prevent the spread of immorality and indecency and in her opinion should not be interpreted to interfere with physicians striving to safeguard the health of their patients.

"Our lawyers have told us that we are operating within the interpretation of the law," she said, "and we will regret it very much indeed if we are obliged to close the clinics, because only through them can underprivileged, sick women receive birth control information which privileged women are able to obtain from their personal physicians."

HOUSEBOAT HOME?

A court hearing tomorrow may determine if her mother's houseboat, moored on the East Boston waterfront, is an improper home for this 17-year-old girl, Phoebe LaPlante. She is the daughter of Mrs. Phoebe Olsen, who wants to keep her with her in their floating residence. Police and the Massachusetts Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children seek to have the girl ordered ashore

HEARING ORDERED FOR BOAT DWELLERS

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children [illegible] was arranging a hearing [illegible] to determine what is to be done with the 17-year-old daughter of Mrs. Phoebe Olsen who with her mother makes her home on an old houseboat tied up at [illegible] wharf in East Boston.

The mother has defied [illegible] to oust her and the [illegible] from the boat. [illegible] representatives of the society reported that the quarters are not adequate or sanitary and that the [illegible] of the [illegible] danger.

Mrs Olsen who purchased the boat last September from a small inheritance says she is living on $5.15 a week which she receives [illegible] welfare department. [illegible]

[illegible]

"Why can't they mind their own business," she said. "Every day they come down here peeping and snooping around and poking about and I have to let them look in every nook and corner. I like the sea and I intend to stay here on this boat. If the police think they're going to put me off they are going to have a lot of putting off to do."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

News that inexpensive playhouses for children are on the market should be heralded as worthy of great rejoicing.

RUTH MUGGLEBEE

For no matter how careful the youngster may be, his playing within the portals of the house does cause wear and tear on the upholstery.

Some ingenious mind, therefore, has fashioned a playhouse of various and many designs, attractive enough to be an adjunct to anybody's front lawn.

Aside from the health and fun aspects of the innovation, it is well worth owning. For where can a child achieve the joy of that really loveable world of make believe than in a play house of formal design?

Then, too, there are the psychiatric phases of giving a young daughter a playhouse. It might inspire the little lady to extra precautions about cleanliness and tidyness and serve as an incentive to that most important of all things—creative ability.

And how about the community idea of getting an early start in the mind of tomorrow's citizen?

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

A Nationwide Organization Devoted To American Youth in Aviation

Wing Commander's Note: This is the 20th in a series of articles written especially for the Junior Birdmen of America by the headquarters staff of the U. S. Army Air Corps. The series deals with the day-by-day progress of a cadet in Uncle Sam's flying force and relates, in detail, his training at the Randolph Field training center in San Antonio, Tex., and nearby Kelly Field.

ARTICLE 20

Assignment to Sections at Kelly Field

In the last article the arrival at Kelly Field and the impressions made on the new arrivals by that historical air corps post were described.

The ranchman, whose career we have been following in this series of articles, found himself assigned to the squad room with three of his friends who were mentioned in the second of this series of articles.

His roommate, "Red," the son of a World War flier, had the bunk next to him. "Bob," who had run away from home as a boy and had later enlisted in the air corps, had a bunk on the opposite side of the squad room as had "Slim," the son of one of the principal executives of a large corporation in the east.

The friendship of these four had been welded by close association, hard work and many matters in which they had helped each other during their eight months at Randolph Field.

Both "Slim" and "Bob" had lost their roommates due to elimination by the academic board while at Randolph Field. The only thing of which a cadet is afraid is elimination by the academic board, and the constant danger of relief from flying serves to draw friends closer together.

"Red" was [illegible] and had [illegible] which [illegible] was [illegible] as pursuit [illegible] of bombardment [illegible] the aim [illegible] of bombardment greater performance is required of the modern pursuit airplane and greater flying ability and tactical skill is required of their pilots.

Our ranchman was assigned to the bombardment section. Ever since he first saw the majestic flight of enormous bombers pass over his ranch with the combined roar of their engines which shook the earth, his ideal was bombardment aviation and his desire for [illegible] had been increased materially since the development of the modern four-engined bomber, sometimes called the flying fortress.

Bob was assigned to observation. He had selected this because he felt that in this role he could be of the greatest service and could best take advantage of his practical experience.

Others had much better academic training than Bob had, but for years he had been a soldier and was thoroughly familiar with the various tactical formations of ground troops. He was also an expert radio operator. In addition to this he was older than the average flying cadets and his additional age and experience permitted him to more readily place himself in the position of the supreme commander and to decide what that commander would like to know, were he in the commander's place.

This is the decision which must constantly be made by the observation pilot and the observer. Also no matter how much the observer sees, it is of no use to anyone unless it is promptly transmitted to the ground headquarters concerned.

"Slim," the son of a corporation executive, was assigned to attack [illegible] which is sent against [illegible] ground troops [illegible] and to silence [illegible] aircraft so that bombardment can effectively reach their objective. "Slim" said that if a war came along what he wanted was action, and he knew of no better place to find it than in attack.

Two or three days, after reporting, were allowed for the cadets to get settled, draw their equipment and, as at Randolph Field, receive the preliminary instruction necessary before starting actual flying training.

On the first Monday after reporting, we find the four friends with the other cadets at their respective sections. After careful instruction as to the particular and special characteristics of the service type aircraft each of the students begins dual instruction. After an hour or two they are safe to fly solo.

By Wednesday or Thursday of the first week they are well started on their advanced flying course.

In the next article you will learn of some of the experiences in the pursuit section.

Foss Park, Broadway at the corner of the Northern Artery, will be the scene tomorrow of the third of four model plane contests being held this week under direction of Miss Jane A. McCarthy, handcraft supervisor of the Somerville Recreation Commission and her assistant, William J. Macdonald.

Today the contest was at Lincoln Park, Washington street, near Union square. Friday it will take place at Dilboy Field, Alewife Brook parkway near the Clarendon Hill car barns.

Junior Birdmen rules and regulations are being used in the H. L. glider, H. L. stick and R. O. G. cabin events. There will also be a competition for kit and home made models.

All Junior Birdmen of Somerville are welcome to compete for the prizes and the title of Somerville champion.

DON'T blame Walter O'Keefe if he "stays after school" when "Town Hall Tonight" on the air comes to an end this evening. Pretty young Billie Bailey is the songstress extraordinary to be his program guest—Billie being a former school ma'am.

Said sweet soloing Miss Bailey put aside her text books and left her juvenile pupils to other tutoring in Milwaukee, to become a popular air artist—adding Radio as the fourth R to her three R's of the classroom.

It's a recall for this personable lass, her appearance during the same hour not long ago having prompted fan mail aplenty. Likewise returning for another turn with Walter, listeners will hear the Texas Wranglers turn in more of their original cowboy vocal and instrumental novelties. These are honest-to-yippee ranch riders from the wide open spaces bossed by a bona-fide and bowlegged bronco buster named Tex Lewis.

Goodman and Jane Ace, the "Easy Aces" of the air, are going to dramatize their romantic early association which led to their marriage as a celebration of the beginning of their eighth year on the air, beginning (WBZ) with the episode this evening.

They are heard Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, from 7:00 to 7:15 p. m. Their celebration will last four weeks.

Goodman has already written scripts that faithfully disclose the sentimental and the humorous episodes of their childhood courtship and early married life.

THIS EAR—THAT AIR

Sadie Breeze in Ninth Best at Taunton

By MAT KEANEY

Best Bet—Sadie Breeze in 9th

Taunton, Aug 4—Tonight at the Taunton dog track there's to be a [illegible] rehearsal for Friday night's Boston American Pink Final trophy race when practically the same field which takes the word in that feature, will race the futurity distance in the featured eighth race.

These arch rivals Swamp Angel and Cauld Hail hook up once with the odds slightly favoring Swamp Angel, [illegible]

For my best bet I am taking the [illegible] Sadie Breeze in the ninth race.

The handicaps:

FIRST RACE—FUTURITY
PILOT'S CALL, YVONNE LADDIE, JERRY ACTOR

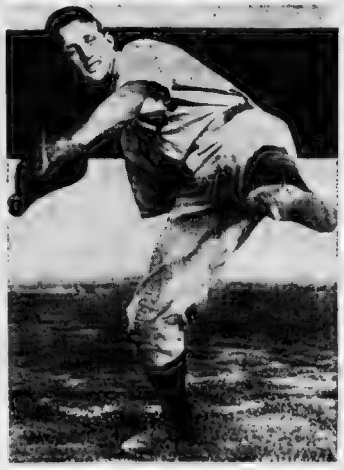
Rook's No Rookie



Gus Rook, Northeastern athlete, has been pitching great ball for the Pere Marquette nine in the Park League this season. He personally conducted the South Boston nine into the play-offs and then defeated Roslindale A. A., 3-2, in the first titular game. Gus fanned 12 in the process.

Dorchester Boy Southie Star

A Dorchester boy put the nine from Southie over. A few years back it would have been treason, but today the Pere Marquette rooters are solidly behind Gus Rook. In fact they take him for a native son.

And rightfully so, for Gus has been the Pere mainspring in the Park League baseball war this year.

The Dorchester boy has won eight games and lost two. During the past two weeks, when the Peres were batting to get into the play-offs Gus was unbeatable. As a result the South Boston team is now definitely in the championship fight being the first team to reach the playoff semifinals.

To make the case even better Gus started his mates on the way to the title by winning the first game Monday from the Roslindale A. A., 3-2. He fanned 12 in so doing.

ANEROID Cost Owner $300

NOW RANKED WITH BEST

By TRACKMAN

Purchased for $300 as a yearling a few years ago, John A. Manfuso's Aneroid now ranks as one of the probable choices in the field that will contest the $50,000 added Massachusetts Handicap, the outstanding event of the New England season, at Suffolk Downs Saturday.

Aneroid can be termed the bargain horse of the starters in the rich classic that is expected to see some 16 to 18 of the outstanding handicap stars of the land match strides.

He was bred by John Hay Whitney at his Lar[illegible] Farm and is by The Porter out of [illegible]

He failed to show much as a juvenile and it was [illegible] in the New England [illegible] the Manfuso [illegible] any promise. He [illegible] well at Agawam and then [illegible] an overnight event at Suffolk Downs.

Marshall Eldredge, himself one of the world's greatest professional outboard motorboat pilots, thinks in the terms of cubic inch fractions as he gears up the engines of Waban's Clint Ferguson, amateur racing king, as the Hearst Regatta of Saturday and Sunday approaches.

None Better As Driver, Mechanic

Young Clint Ferguson, who recently stroked the Tabor Academy eight-oared crew to its second successive Henley Regatta victory on London's Thames river, will be one of the headline amateurs of the hundreds seeking Hearst regatta titles on the Charles river basin this Saturday and Sunday.

But lurking in Clint's background, the undercover man shunning the limelight is Marshall Eldredge, his mechanic, perhaps the highest paid, the most famous professional in outboard motorboat racing.

No matter how good the [illegible] how daring his maneuvers, how well constructed his [illegible] craft, the winner of any races as those being held under the auspices of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser this weekend is decided on the [illegible] of the engine [illegible] the waters behind him.

Any great pilot will tell you that his part in victory is of far lesser importance than that of his motor.

If Ferguson, who has for years dominated the world's amateurs, again paces the Charles River fields this week, Eldredge, who works tirelessly [illegible] engines, adjusting and heightening their efficiency, must share the honors even though he's in the background.

Ferguson himself will be the first to admit the value of his chief mechanic.

Essay on Envy: or Contradiction Among Newport's Journalists

Austen Lake

NEWPORT, R. I., AUG. 4—A STRANGE inconsistency is noticeable in the writings of the several hundred journalists who are covering the International yacht races off the shores of this social center. The hard-shell portion of the newspaper profession are keynoting cynicism and describing the rich citizens and citizenesses who came in their cruising chateaus as a lot of stuffed shirts, little better than dock hunkies at heart. But the lady society editors and the male name-snoopers are extolling the same characters as our most useful and ornamental people.

The papers do not seem to be consistent about class consciousness and their readers are apt to be confused at having some prominent person described at a "Bathtub millionaire" in one section of the journal and as a "fashionplate and popular man about town" in another.

Still, it is an itching temptation to a journalist who has [illegible] metal in his pockets to poke up the [illegible] writings. It soothes him in the region of [illegible] that he sometimes calls his soul.

Because [illegible] come to Newport on mahogany bottoms with wedding-cake superstructures and loaf around in ostentatious attitudes which are [illegible] tantalizing to anyone peering at them from docks smeared with sea-gull lime or chasing around the harbor in [illegible] taxis. So, if the journalist scratches his itch editorially, he is only obeying an impulse that was born when man first swung off the limb of a tree and learned to walk erect. He knows that newspaper fame is made by reiteration, and having [illegible] many names, he does not stand in awe of fame. [illegible] awe, in journalism, is ridicule.

Pierhead Reverie

I HAVE NEVER READ A DEFENSE OF the rich, unless it was by inference in the society columns. If one was ever written it would certainly have to argue that the poor, including the newspaper cynics, all want to be rich themselves. Any definition of envy would admit that its chief element is dislike of someone for being precisely what you wish to be yourself. Though the envious person is usually the last to admit this and prefers to mistake his envy for a higher principle. Permit me to give you an example.

During mid morning of last Sunday I was lurking amid the rubbish of the Newport waterfront and peering toward the filigree yachts where U. S. nobility lolled in cushioned luxury and sipped, pecked and sniffed at their stimulants. They hung shanks over the bannisters that were sometimes nude and sometimes satin, while uniformed flunkies lurked around with liquid ingredients and platters of canapes and motorized cockle-shells floated alongside, ready to trundle them ashore at their whim.

At that instant envy was born. Imagination said how nice it would be to own such an ocean-going greyhound, with its implication of wealth, leisure and power, and just whistle up a hired admiral in gold braid and say, "Shove off the Rangoon immediately, my man, and have the steward uncork another case of that Napoleon cognac."

But then imagination said "No," a person of my new standard of wealth would have to invite equally supercilious people to go along. [illegible] very much having sailed for Rangoon and [illegible] my admiral to turn about and sail somewhere else and [illegible] that too. I could not, said imagination, even [illegible] my own icebox for a snack of liverwurst on [illegible] bread. People of my new standard of wealth have butlers [illegible] icebox [illegible].

Life [illegible] personal [illegible] on my [illegible] I decided not to be rich [illegible] than I am.

Cubic Capacity for Fun Limited

SO, THE ESTATE OF THE RICH seems less enviable at close range. They get just as sick as other people, because, while I loitered, a physician and his little black kit-bag was hustled into a launch and out to the private navy. And they get just as grouchy, for presently a sleep-frowsed head of a yacht owner thrust from a porthole and yelled at an oarsman peddling fresh mackerel, to "Get t'ell out of here with that din." They have their family rows, divorces and lawsuits.

And inasmuch as no man ever rises so high in the scale of living but that he yearns to mount higher, they are subject to the same kinds of envy, fretfulness and exasperation as that which plagues the people back on the docks. Somewhere above the pinnacle is up and that is where they wish to be.

I suspect that the human capacity for enjoyment is fixed at so many cubic centimetres per person and that no man may get a greater tinge of pleasure than the limitation of his nervous setup permits. Joy depends on the freshness and novelty of any experience and a joy once captured is a joy soon lost. So that a pleasure hunter must constantly seek goofier things to pierce his boredom, lest one novelty become remindful of some kindred novelty, and hence be no novelty at all.

For example, the rich man cannot suspect the exquisite delights of peeling off a suit of sweat drenched dungarees after

Robert Moses Grove, Jr., 12-year-old son of the Red Sox pitcher, was admitted to St. Elizabeth's Hospital today to have his tonsils removed, but still the youngster was happy.

It seems young Grove was supposed to have entered the hospital earlier this week, but he wanted to see his famous Dad pitch. So he saw the "old man" in one of his best games of his career yesterday.

Sox Dislike 'Dead' Ball

Can't Hit It Out of the Infield

By JOE CASHMAN

[illegible]

All they see now are batters [illegible] down the fences and a parade of pitchers getting slaughtered.

"All the science has been removed from the game. The hit-and-run, the squeeze, the stolen base, the throw from the outfield nipping the runner at the plate; in short, the real thrills of the game are practically extinct.

They'll all return with the slower ball. The fans will get new and greater enjoyment out of the pastime and the magnates will profit too because the crowds will be larger everywhere.

Valenti Rematches Dick Maloney McCoy and Shucco On Way Up

By JACK CONWAY

I WAS HAVING dinner with Matchmaker "Rip" Valenti of the Goodwin Club and Bill Brennan, manager of Al McCoy, in the grill room of the Parker House.

MR. BOSTON

I asked "Rip" how he had been doing at the track.

"I'm not going to the track these days," replied Valenti. "Every time I go to the races somebody touts me on half a dozen horses in each race, and I end up betting on them. Unfortunately I'm not a $2 bettor, and so have taken it on the chin.

"Then the boxing game is on the way back, and I must attend to my business."

I mentioned to Valenti that I thought his recent "Dream Show" headed by Al McCoy and Jack McCarthy had done much to bring back boxing here.

"There were some good local boxers on the card, and that is why it went over in such a large way," said Valenti. "People are still talking about the swell fights put up by McCoy, Maloney, Zanelli and Warrenton.

"You will like my next show even better. I have closed with Bill Brennan to have McCoy defend his title as New England heavyweight champion against Tony Shucco over the 12-round route.

"This should be a thrilling bout. McCoy won the title by defeating Shucco at Mechanics Building last December. I thought Shucco had the edge going into the twelfth round. McCoy then scored a knockdown and tipped the scales in his own favor."

"This time McCoy will knock Shucco out," interrupted Brennan. "I thought Al looked like a perfect fighting machine as he stopped Jack McCarthy.

"McCoy punched perfectly with both hands, and slipped punches like a master boxer. I wish Al had been battling Jimmy Braddock instead of McCarthy. He would have knocked Braddock out."

Brennan said McCoy's proposed bout with Ford Smith in Montreal had been called off on account of the fact the latter suffered an injury to one of his dukes while training.

"Looks as if McCoy will have to save his big wallop for Shucco," said Brennan.

Maloney Has Bright Future

"Maloney will be a ring sensation in another year," said Valenti with a show of enthusiasm. "He displayed a fine left hook against Kelley, while his right hand also looked good.

"There has been a talk of my matching Maloney with Lou Brouillard. The Brouillard bout will come in time, but I don't think Dick will be ready for Lou until next spring. It would be unfair to Maloney to ask him to clash with a boxer of Brouillard's experience at this time.

"I am trying to secure an opponent for Maloney who is at least a 15 per cent better fighter than Kelley. In this way I shall be able to give the South Boston youngster a real test.

"I liked the way Ralph Zanelli belted Bobby Allen out of the picture. Zanelli is one of the best punchers in the welterweight group.

"I talked with Allen after the bout," chimed in Brennan, "and he told me he was out when dropped for the first time by Zanelli. Allen said he didn't know where he was until he was hit for the second time after he regained his feet. The second punch cleared Bobby's head, as so often happens.

"Allen didn't know how much punishment he had absorbed which is why he objected to the referee stopping the bout."

[illegible]

As the bout will be staged [illegible] the closing of the summer horse and dog race meetings it will not have any local sports opposition. This fact is sure to help the gate.

Outboard Motor Races on Charles

THE GREATEST outboard motor regatta ever held in New England will be staged in the Charles River Basin on Saturday and Sunday by the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser. There has been a steady increase in interest in outboard motor racing. With the leading outboard racing pilots of the country entered in the regatta in the Basin, it is expected that several new records will be established.

ten hours tending a blast furnace, and going to sit amid the cooling breezes on the back stoop in his underwear. Cool breezes are no novelty when one owns a sea-going ark and an air conditioned apartment.

ONE QUESTIONS WHETHER THE NEWPORT millionaires who are listed in the society columns as Among those present get any more fun from their water palaces during race week than Joe Doakes and wife derive from systematic saving for a Sunday outing at the seashore. The Newport [illegible] need not anticipate any physical want. But Joe Doakes and wife enjoy weeks of delicious dreaming about the feel of sand between their toes, a delicatessen lunch out of a shoe box and the musical squeals of Doakes Jr., age 3, upon first sitting down in cold salt water.

But, I despair of convincing Joe Doakes, and wife, of his opportunity for greater joy. Ambition, thwart and envy is festering away within him to join with those people whom the spokesmen of the masses effect to despise. He wishes to leave the crowd, and see in the society pillars, "Among those present at Haffenreffer's Fish and Chowder soiree, was Mr. Joseph Doakes, the well known Cambridge Blacksmith's helper, and wife."

As a novelty, this would give great satisfaction to Joe Doakes, and wife. But it is merely old stuff to the Newport bathtub millionaires.

PREDICT Star Will ACCEPT

U. S. SURE TO LOSE CUP

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Aug. 4 (INS)—Don Budge, positively the finest "buy" in the field of lawn tennis, not only will be offered a minimum of $100,000 to turn professional before the close of the national singles championships next month, but there is better than a fair chance that he will accept.

[illegible]

"Oh, yes," he went on very casually. "We can't beat the Germans without Budge. We almost didn't beat them with Budge. I don't think we can even beat the Australians—at full strength—without Budge. If he jumps there will be no one else. We'll certainly lose the Davis Cup next year, and it will stay lost for a long time."

[illegible]

NEED BUDGE

[illegible]

GREATEST RECORD

[illegible]

"Heavy pressure will be brought against Budge during and after the championships, especially if he wins," the official said in parting. "Probably Tilden, Fred Perry and Ellie Vines will work on him. You see, they know they need him."

What he means is that the Vines-Perry tour was a good one last year, but an act of that kind is like a razor blade. It can only be used once. After that you could give it away to strangers.

Spillway Earns Room and Board

By The Associated Press

Spillway has won only two of his six starts, but already he has more than paid for his room and board. J. W. Brown purchased the son of Cohort for $1700 at the Saratoga yearling sales last year. His winnings total $3355. Of that amount $1975 was picked up yesterday in whipping the highly regarded Maetall in the Saratoga sales stakes, while held at 10 to 1. Maetall victorious in his three previous races [illegible] Fresh Stakes [illegible] Dewitt Page [illegible] but Mountain Ridge, which finished [illegible] Mrs. Ethel V. Mars back $11,000.

Cab [illegible] 2nd once again has proved that Trainer Hirsch Jacobs made a wise claim when he took the Chilean-bred five-year-old out of his first race in this country for $4000. The South American horse has started four times in the silks of Jacobs' wife and has chalked up two victories, finished in a dead heat in another and third in the other.

When he won at Saratoga yesterday, beating Count Arthur and Corrie, it was the second straight [illegible] which he had scored while held at odds of 8 to 10.

TRAINS IN FREAK WAY

By HYPE IGOE

Pompton Lakes, Aug. 4 (INS) — Joe Louis has taken up one of the strangest bits of freak training that ever a champion has done in all the history of heavyweight conditioning.

[illegible]

RACES AFTER STONES

Joe takes to the best [illegible] in the wagon and automobile tracks and he keeps watching for round stones as he goes along. When he sees one he picks it up on the fly and tosses it twenty or thirty feet in front of him and then races after it like a terrier.

He tries to reach and retrieve it before the stone has stopped rolling.

Old Blackburn keeps bawling "Roll dem stones!" Joe will pick up and chase after a hundred of these stones before he gets back to camp and when he does get there he is in a fine white lather. It is the hardest body bending stunt ever devised.

Danno, Clark Vie In Weight Test

The 84th annual Scotch picnic and athletic games of the Boston Caledonia Club will be held at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, next Saturday.

This year the Scotch committee has made an innovation by securing Dan O'Mahony, the former world champion wrestler and champion weight thrower of Ireland, to meet George (Dazzler) Clark, the Scotch champion and claimant of the world's all-around professional weight throwing titles.

These strong men will meet in four contests, including throwing the 56-pound weight for distance and height, throwing the 28-pound weight and tossing the caber.

Caseys, Silk Sox In Second Game

With the Pere Marquettes of South Boston the first team to reach the Park League semifinals through their two straight wins over the Roslindale A. A., the battles for remaining three positions in the penultimate round continue tonight.

ORDER Probe in BOXER'S DEATH

Pittsburgh, Aug. 4 (AP)—Deputy Coroner J. L. Davidson ordered a "thorough investigation" today into the death last night of Johnny Page, Chicago lightweight, 24 hours after he was knocked out by Eddie Zivic.

Davidson said a post mortem would be held and that he would question Zivic, Page's handlers, the examining physicians and ring officials.

Page, fighting as a substitute for Charley Burns of St. Michaels, Pa., was leading the fight before he was floored. Assistants carried him to his corner and worked on him for 30 minutes before he was removed to a hospital.

Executive Types Differ

By B. C. FORBES

Which type of executive more often suceeds, the one who is constantly struggling against an avalanche of work or the one who sheds routine as much as possible and is more or less footfree and brainfree?

One day Edward H. Harriman, the wizard who made decaying railroads bloom, walked into an office, accompanied by associates, and found an executive with his feet on his desk. Everybody was sure the railway king would fire him. Instead, he observed:

"I like executives who have time to put their feet on the table. It indicates they are taking time to think."

After more than 30 years' observation, I have about reached this conclusion: Very large enterprises should have, as senior executives, one of each class.

The first team of this kind that springs to mind is Chairman Owen Young and President Gerard Swope of General Electric. Mr. Young is essentially of the calm, quiet-moving, deliberative, reflective type. Mr. Swope bubbles over with energy, is always on the jump, a lightning worker.

Other two-masted business schooners sailing the industrial sea successfully include Chairman Charles M. Schwab and President Eugene G. Grace, of Bethlehem Steel; Chairman Myron C. Taylor and President William A. Irvin, of U. S. Steel; Chairman Andrew W. Robertson and President F. A. Merrick, of Westinghouse Electric; Chairman Colby M. Chester and President C. W. Francis, of General Foods; Chairman George M. Verity and President Charles R. Hook, of American Rolling Mill; Chairman Winthrop W. Aldrich and President Donald Campbell, of the Chase National Bank; Chairman James H. Perkins and President Gordon S. Rentschler, of the National City Bank of New York; Chairman W. C. Potter and President P. Conway, of the Guaranty Company of New York; Chairman A. P. Sloan and President William S. Knudsen, of General Motors; Chairman P. D. Saylor and President R. W. Moore, of Canada Dry Ginger Ale.

The fewer details an active head of a corporation shoulders, the more likely he is to become a creative upbuilder. Our largest ocean liners of today have two captains, the captain in supreme charge of navigation and a staff captain to handle the ship's personnel, passengers, etc.

Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines, is a shining example of successful one-man control of a world-wide business. Although Mr. Watson is more active than perhaps any other American business leader in both national and international movements, and is the driving power behind his extremely profitable enterprise, he somehow contrives to find time to think.

Similarly, Robert W. Woodruff manages to combine business statesmanship with active day-to-day direction of his money-earning company, Coca Cola. Walter S. Gifford, president of the largest enterprise of them all, American Telephone & Telegraph, also is both a deep thinker, a policy shaper, a business statesman and, at the same time, in active direction of operations.

Most Standard Oil companies are headed by action-men—although it is significant that President Walter C. Teagle of Standard Oil of New Jersey, the biggest unit of them all, only the other day became chairman, to enable him to have more time for reflection and deliberation.

My feeling is that, no matter how dynamic the guiding genius of a business may be, he is wise, after passing middle age, to bring along a younger dynamo, so that he himself may have more opportunity to develop business statesmanship.

STOCK Prices IMPROVE

RAILS, METALS FEATURE

New York, Aug. 4—Rails, metals and specialties were leaders in stock market upturns of fractions to a point or more today. Trading got away to an indifferent start, with rails droopy, but energy was injected into carriers by a Wall Street rumor current wage negotiations would likely produce a smaller pay increase than demanded by unions.

Lead shares picked up on a rise of $5 a ton for the metal and various industrials and specialties had aid from improved earnings and dividends.

AM. TELEPHONE OFF

Backward much of the time were Western Union, American Telephone, Boeing, Deere, U. S. Rubber, Allis Chalmers, American Locomotive, American Can and Consolidated Oil.

Socony felt the glow of improved earnings. A dividend of $1 against arrears of American Woolen preferred gave the shares a boost. Activity and higher prices for International Paper issues was explained in Wall Street in terms of securities and exchange permission to carry out its recapitalization plan.

Upturns in rails brightened the bond market. Corn was higher, wheat lower. Cotton extended a mid-morning rally. The pound sterling and French franc were off.

Buying of copper issues, analysts said, was attributable in part to strength in the price of copper abroad and quickening domestic demand. Foreign demand continues brisk and prices abroad will probably remain firm, it was argued.

CURRENT ITEMS

At the start of trading, followers of steel and power shares had the benefit of encouraging news from these industries.

A continued brisk pace of steel output through August is indicated despite shrinking order backlogs, Iron Age noted.

"The automobile industry," the survey said, "slower than expected in making volume purchases for 1938 models, will come into the market in a bigger way within the next two or three weeks, perhaps ushering in the fall buying movement for industry generally."

Production of electric power in the week ended July 31 totaled $2,256,335,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reported. This was only .1 of one per cent under the preceding week and represented a gain of eight per cent over the corresponding week of 1936.

The French franc opened off .00⅛ of a cent at 3.75¼ cents. The pound sterling was down 1-16 of a cent at $4.98 5-16.

Over-the-Counter Rules Announced By SEC

Washington, Aug. 4 (INS)—Adoption of stringent regulations designed to curb "manipulative, deceptive and fraudulent" practices in the over-the-counter market for stocks and bonds, was announced today by the SEC.

In substance, the new rules prohibit a broker or dealer from inducing purchase or sale of any security by any act or practice that would defraud or deceive any person. Misrepresentation is also considered illegal under the commission's regulations. The effective date of the regulations is Oct. 1.

Tax Bill Ready For White House

The measure now goes to the White House. Its approval removes one vital preadjournment measure from the congressional program.

The Tydings bill would relax the anti-trust laws to permit manufacturers and wholesalers to fix retail prices on their goods sold in states having price maintenance laws.

MOTOR Exports RISE

FIVE YEARS OF RECOVERY

New York, August 4 (AP)—Foreign sales of American motor makers have rounded out five years of recovery from the depression depths, with the tide still rising.

From the low point touched around the middle of 1932, the curve has moved persistently upward toward the 1929 high sales record in world markets.

Motor exports have taken a long lead over last year and scouts returning from abroad have held out hope for continuation of the rising trend.

In the first five months, shipments of passenger cars increased to 107,883 from 62,080 in the comparable 1936 period. Truck exports jumped to 88,082 from 49,631.

American manufacturers have been selling more cars and trucks abroad in spite of intensified efforts of other countries to organize their own output of motor products and to enter the world market.

As gains in exports to South Africa, Latin America and the Far East indicated, rising foreign sales have been traceable partly to improvement in purchasing power of distant buyers. At the same time motor authorities give much credit to reciprocal trade treaties negotiated the blast few years.

The motor age, surging forward again after slowing during the worst depression years, now is represented by more than 40,000,000 vehicle registrations in 153 countries, Reeves noted. This compares with about 35,000,000 in 1929 and less than 9,000,000 in 1919, on the threshold of the tremendous post-war expansion.

"Our neighbors abroad are working with us to expand world motor trade," he said. "Heavy taxation is still the major barrier to the expansion of automobile markets in European countries."

Foreign sales of leading makers in recent months relatively have tended to run ahead of domestic shipments.

Amoskeag Petition Under Advisement

By Associated Press

Arthur Black, special master acting in the liquidation of the defunct Amoskeag Manufacturing Co. of Manchester, N. H., took under advisement today a petition to surrender $559,927 of the remaining assets to trustees.

The petition was submitted by Frederick C. Dumaine and Joseph P. Carney, trustees, who maintained expected liabilities might total $310,661. The assets, they said, would also increase about $2,500,000 should the firm prevail in a suit to recover that amount in processing taxes ruled invalid by the Supreme Court.

The company's cotton plantation in Arkansas, the trustees said, might be of some value, but was not listed among assets.

Lothrop Withington, counsel for the shareholders, opposed the petition, contending it would take away from stockholders the protection due them in future distribution of assets.

Comments of Brokers

Allowing for further irregularity of minor proportions, we believe the industrials will continue firm throughout the week and would look for the steels to resume the leadership by Thursday morning.—Berry Grant, Hornblower & Weeks.

There is nothing ahead prior to adjournment to widen public interest in dealings so that continued quiet but fairly firm specialty market appears in prospect.—J. P. Maher, Shields & Co.

Weakness of the rails appears to be affecting trading sentiment and under the circumstances action of the rails over the next few sessions will probably determine the trend of the general list.—J. S. Wilson, Josephthal & Co.

As the industrial average approaches the various supply strata just below the March highs the going should become increasingly difficult and a more thorough reaction would probably become necessary prior to any attempt to clear this hurdle. There is no change in our opinion on the major uptrend.—J. S. Bache & Co.

Eye South For New Plants

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

Copyright, 1937, by Universal Service

New York, Aug. 4—Outstanding industrial managers here are looking increasingly to the South as the field of most rapid economic development in the United States.

Many are surveying the Southern states with an eye to the location of new plants. They recognize that the South has important natural resources, being especially richly endowed in raw materials.

In pointing to the impending changes in the South, some of which have been brought into immediate focus of popular attention through discussion of the pending wages and hours legislation at Washington, one major industrialist said to me:

"If Horace Greeley were alive today he doubtless would say: 'Go South, young man.' The basic question is whether as the undeveloped South becomes developed it will check the growth of the Midle West, just as the earlier development of the Middle West challenged the industrial supremacy of New England.

"The whole tone of industrial wages in the United States in the coming decades will depend on changes in the South.

"In his original controversy with Alexander Hamilton, Thomas Jefferson, as a great slaveowning Southern planter, visualized the United States as primarily an agricultural country. Hamilton immediately sensed the possibilities of industrial expansion.

"The South, wanting to trade its agricultural products for British manufactured goods, soon came into conflict with the industrial North, which wanted a protective tariff. The South thought they could get more goods in exchange from free trade England.

"And until comparatively recently the South overlooked its potentialities as a center of industry. Northern textile manufacturers, moving to the South to get closer to the source of raw materials and to take advantage of labor conditions, have at last awakened the South to its possibilities for balanced economic development. In addition to the great cotton and textile mills, rayon is extensively manufactured in the South. Likewise steel, with access to iron and coal in Alabama, can be more economically produced in the South than in the North. The newest interest is paper, being made from slash pine. Pine can be raised in 20-year cycles, whereas spruce in Canada takes twice as long. As a result, the South will displace Canada as a cheap source of supply of paper."

Another industrialist, whose views were candid, stressed that the new and industrialized South had become tariff-minded.

One employer said that giving high wage incentives to southern workers developed a level of efficiency comparable to that attained in northern mills.

One business leader said that certain southern senators had unwittingly been sacrificing states' rights, and other traditional principles of the South in going along with the New Deal program.

Another pointed out that the true greatness of the South would not be realized until southern wage rates rose to northern levels, saying that a low wage policy meant exploiting poverty and narrowing the southern market for goods.

Another factor driving the South toward industrialization and diversification is gradual elimination of that section's monopoly position in the world cotton market. Ever since 1890 this country has been getting a declining ratio of the world's cotton business, and in recent years this adverse trend has been accelerated.

Price raising activities at home have contributed to this development, and efforts of other countries to develop economic self-sufficiency have operated in the same direction. On the other hand, farseeing southerners think that the South will do better when it, itself, in its own mills, converts the raw material into finished cotton products.

Of course, the TVA experiment of the Roosevelt administration has accelerated promotions efforts in the South, especially around the Tennessee valley.

Wilson-Jones Declares Special

Directors of the Wilson-Jones Company in accordance with the intention expressed when the May 1, 1937, dividend was paid, have declared a special dividend of 25 cents per share payable August 19, 1937, to common stock holders of record at the close of business August 14, 1937.

It is the present intention of the board of directors to give consideration to a year-end dividend at their meeting in October, 1937.

To Push Dollar Bill at Next Session

Washington, Aug. 4—(INS)—The new dollar stabilizing bill introduced in the Senate by Senator Elmer Thomas (D.) Oklahoma, will be held up until the next session of Congress, its author announced today.

The bill, which Thomas and other supporters insist would force England and France to agree to an international monetary stabilization move, will be pushed next session in connection with new farm legislation, said proponents.

"I was going to ask for consideration this session," Thomas said, "but I think it would be better to wait for a new farm bill, as this program fits in with any effort to establish the purchasing power of the farmer."

Despite Thomas' decision to postpone action on his measure until next year, shearings on the bill went forward before a Senate agriculture subcommittee this morning, with Rene Leon, former administration money expert on the stand. Leon warned of complete collapse of world trade unless an international monetary stabilization system is set up. He said:

"We must have a system that will be sound and workable, and that will be permanently placed beyond the reach of the money managers. We must have one kind of system which will restore money and trade to their relative position in the economic scheme."

The Thomas bill would compel the Federal Reserve Board to peg the gold content of the dollar.

Subject to Insurance Law

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP)—Attorney-General John J. Bennett, Jr., said in an opinion today that state banks and trust companies which are members oft he Federal Reserve System are subject to New York's unemployment insurance law.

He gave the opinion at the request of Gleenn A. Bowers, director of the unemployment insurance division, who said that various state banks have made applications for refunds of contributions on basis of a recent Internal Revenue Bureau opinion that they are not subject to the tax.

SEES Change in OUTLOOK

FIRST NATIONAL CITES REASONS

The First National Bank of Boston in its current New England letter says that during the past few weeks there has been, we believe, a fundamental change in the outlook for American enterprise. Many of the threats to our form of government and private capitalistic system have been removed, or the dangers minimized. The attempt to reorganize the Supreme Court has been decisively defeated.

The radical activities of labor have apparently passed the peak and serious consideration is now being given to impose responsibility upon labor unions. Indications are that industrial relations will be placed on a sounder and more equitable basis. Of much significance is the fact that the more conservative labor groups are important factors in this movement.

The plan of covering the country with government power plants in competition with private firms is not likely to receive legislative sanction. Reports emanating from reliable sources indicate that reasonable boundary lines will be fixed by Congress beyond which Federal authority cannot encroach upon state and local activities or upon the field of private enterprise.

It is dawning on the man in the street that in order to distribute wealth it must be produced and that this can be done most effectively under favorable conditions for business enterprise and not by harassing legislation and by destroying the profit motive.

Aggregate production of representative industries for the first six months was nearly 25 per cent above the same period of last year. In view of the many adverse influences that have been at work during the past few months, it would seem that business has great underlying strength. Furthermore, business sentiment is fundamentally better.

This undoubtedly is due to the subsidence of industrial turmoil and the definite lining up of public oponion on the side of law and order as well as for the preservation of the integrity of the judicial branch of the government. There is reason to believe that we have passed a major crisis insofar as the threat to our representative form of government is concerned.

The question of public finance continues to be of deep concern. While Federal deficits are declining due to increased revenues, expenditures continue at the peak. This problem is not so important from the near-range point of view as the load can be carried in a period of rising business. If the trend of rising Federal expenditures is not soon checked, the real concern will be for the future—the next depression when governmental costs may prove overwhelming.

In consequence of these developments, there is a rift in the clouds that provides a basis for more confidence in the long-range future. That business has sensed this change is in part reflected by the increase in new corporate capital issues, which in June were the highest since March, 1931. It is true, so far we have only a few indications but they may be significant of a fundamental change in the tide of affairs in this country.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Aug. 4—July engineering construction awards aggregated $260,001,000, a weekly average rate of $52,000,000, Engineering-News Record reported today. This was a gain over awards of $226,595,000, or an average of $45,319,000 weekly in July, 1936, and an increase over the $50,190,000 average weekly for 1937 to date. July contracts, however, fell below those of the two preceding months, May awards averaging $58,735,000 and June $68,600,000 weekly.

Increased demands for electrolytic copper, due to anticipated higher prices, was reported in trade circles. Export copper currently is quoted at 14.60 cents a pound and domestic at 14 cents. Fabricators and independent copper users, who have limited buying since April, are said to be entering the market again.

Unfilled orders of Fairchild Aviation Corp. on June 30 totaled $1,203,289, against $951,980 a year ago, a gain of 26.4 per cent, the company announced.

Lake Superior Iron ore shipments in June totaled 10,704,457 tons, a new record, against 10,107,883 in June and 7,159,563 in July, 1936.

H. L. Green Co., operator of 136 variety chain stores throughout the country, reported July sales of $2,702,290, against $2,411,795 in July, 1936, an increase of 12 per cent. Sales for the first half of 1937 aggregated $15,580,150, an increase of 11.4 per cent over the $13,983,955 for the like 1936 period.

According to official Federal estimates, during 1936 the national income of the United States totaled $63,799,000,000. How this huge sum was produced, and sources receiving it, are shown by this chart.

Largest producers of income include manufacturing, trade, finance and services. The federal government also ranks high with its relief payments.

Wages and salaries in industries rank highest on the receiving side of the income scales. Second largest division is that of entrepreneurial withdrawals—money taken out of business by proprietors.

Electricity Output 8 P.C. Over 1936 Week

New York, Aug. 3 (AP) Production of electricity in the United States for the week ended July 31 was 2,256,335,000 kilowatt-hours, a decrease of .1 of 1 percent from the previous week's output but a gain of 8 per cent over the same week last year, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

The decline, which was contra-seasonal, carried the Associated Press index of production with 1929-30 taken as 100, to 121.2 from 122.0 the previous week. The index, adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 114.6 a year ago.

	1937	1936	1935	1934	1933
Highs	122.6	119.8	103.5	94.4	91.9
Lows	116.3	102.0	94.1	91.9	80.2

The following percentage increases were scored in geographic regions: New England 10.1, Middle Atlantic 8.2, central industrial 10.1, west central 2.8, Southern States 11.4, Rocky Mountain 13.5, and Pacific Coast 7.4.

MEEHAN Expulsion STUDIED

IS CASE CLOSED?

By LESLIE GOULD
International News Service Financial Writer

New York, Aug. 4—Only interest in the expulsion of Mike Meehan from the New York Stock Exchange and the curb by the Securities and Exchange Commission is whether he, or rather his counsel, will carry the fight further and make it a constitutional test of the SEC act.

This is complicated some by the fact that Meehan is a patient in Bloomingdale — the Westchester Hospital for mental cases. Also whether his family would care to go further in fighting the case.

On the expense part, some of the boys downtown would be glad to take care of that. Certainly W. E. Hutton and Company, which has a case on its hands involving Atlas Tack, and Charles Wright, the stock exchange specialist who is having trouble over deals in a cheap air stock, would like to see the law test.

OPINIONS DIFFER

There is a difference of opinion downtown whether Meehan can continue as a partner in his firm, although he is under expulsion from the exchange. This, of course, is provided he regains his health, and does not fight the SEC order, or does fight it and loses.

If he were permitted to do that, the expulsion order would be nullified. All he would have to do would be to transfer his exchange memberships to another partner and continue to run his business from his firm office. That would be no punishment. An expulsion order to be effective would have to mean his being barred from the brokerage business and retirement from his firm.

The firm of M. J. Meehan & Co. is not involved in this case, so it could carry on without Mike. His son is now a partner in the firm, having received a seat as a gift from his father when the proceedings before the SEC were on. That was in the late fall of 1935.

COULD BE TEST

The Meehan case, which involves the manipulation of Bellanca Aircraft stock on the curb, could be turned into a test of the Securities and Exchange Commission in two ways.

One would be action by Meehan. This would be in the form of injunction suits against the SEC and the stock exchange in carrying the SEC's expulsion suit.

The second method would be for the stock exchange and the other two markets—the curb and Chicago Board of Trade—or anyone of them, to refuse to expel Meehan from membership. That also would throw the matter into the courts.

Meehan has been tried only before the SEC. There has been no action in the courts. The commission has filled the triple roles of prosecutor, judge and jury. If there is a test, the first is the more likely of course. It is not likely that any of the exchanges would care to go to bat at this time for Mr. Meehan.

B. & O. Would Borrow $5,000,000 From RFC

Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co. asked ICC to approve its application to the RFC for a $5,000,000 five-year loan.

The road plans to use proceeds of the loan, together with treasury funds, to meet the maturity of $4,427,000 5 per cent general mortgage bonds of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railroad, plus $1,025,000 of B. & O. equipment trust certificates. The bond issue matures September 1, while the equipment trust certificates matured in July and August 1.

The road stated that it had originally expected to be able to meet these maturities, but that floods and "disturbed industrial conditions" had so reduced its income in May and June that it had to abandon its original plan. The loan from the RFC would mature Sept. 1, 1942.

American Woolen $1 Dividend Voted

New York, August 4 (AP)—Directors of American Woolen Co. today declared a dividend of $1 a share on the 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock on account of accumulations. The same amount was paid in the preceding quarter.

As of June 15 arrears totaled $61.50 a share. The dividend is payable September 15 to stock of record September 1.

Steady Undertone Rules London Market

London, Aug. 4 (INS)—Trading in the London stock market was restricted today in several sections reacting to the end-of-account period but the general undertone remained steady on the improvement of international politics.

International issues, mining shares and industrials led the board. U. S. Steel at 118 3-32 dollars and International Nickel at 67 17-32 dollars led the first group. Kaffirs struck the keynote in the mining shares although the list suffered early setbacks.

Around mid-day Kaffirs started a sharp recovery and closed higher on the balance. West Witwatersrand sold at 9¼ pds., up ⅛, for the outstanding gain. Coppers were the only dull issue with most quotations unchanged.

Employment

New Low Employment rates: 1 day—20c per line. 3 or more days—15c per line.

Job Tips Always fill out an application blank for a position neatly. In many firms where an interview with the employer is not always possible, an application blank is the first impression he has of an applicant. If the application blank is scrawled and messy, the employer is inclined to believe that the applicant's work will be of the same caliber.

Insure the G-Men

STRONG support has appeared in Congress for the bill proposed by Representative Powers of New Jersey to provide adequately for the families of G-Men killed in line of duty.

The best feature of the Powers Bill is that it establishes A PERMANENT POLICY in a matter that Congress has hitherto dealt with in a haphazard, though sympathetic, fashion.

It provides for the payment of $10,000 to the family of an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation killed in action.

The government, in waging its war on crime, has no more dangerous service than the Bureau of Investigation. Many of its best men have sacrificed their lives, and the constant threat of death hangs over the entire service.

It should give them every facility for crime detection, and for their own protection.

It should also pay them well for the dangerous work they do, and for those who die in service there should be the satisfaction of knowing loved ones WILL NOT BE NEGLECTED BY A FORGETFUL NATION.

The American people are grateful to the G-Men for their courageous and intelligent reduction of crime hazards in the nation.

Death for a Dollar Bill!

THE will to live is powerful in most people; not so, however, in ALL people. One of the latter group was the late Fred Brodie, Winchendon World War veteran, whose suicide note to his Worcester landlady read:

"I'm no piker. Here's a dollar for gas, and it's cheap at that."

Fred Brodie was wrong; death for a dollar isn't cheap, and probably never will be.

Suicides make the serious mistake of thinking they have nothing to live for. That is something no one can ever really know. What the next hour holds for us must always be the mystery of mysteries.

Every hour, to a normal person, is the GATEWAY TO LIFE, leading to the HARVEST OF OPPORTUNITIES.

Henry Ford was forty when he founded his company, now among the world's biggest. Edison, past the seventy mark, was still inventing. Other examples, too numerous to mention, would fill this entire newspaper.

What futile purpose any man must have devoted himself to, if he has convinced himself he has NOTHING FURTHER to live for!

The World Comes to Them

In fancy, they sail the seven seas, rise above them in airplanes or go under them in submarines, scale the highest mountains, and delve into the mysteries of the polar regions.

They are wise, these young people. All the knowledge that man has acquired in the centuries that separate him from the Stone Age await those who tap the vast resources of the Library.

Books are greater than any vehicle of transportation ever built or imagined. In them we travel not only to the places that are, but also to the places and men that were.

We have only one fault to find with the Library's "Explorers' Club. Its membership should not be a thousand. It should be one hundred thousand.

A Glass Gown—What Next?

BUILDING a glass house in a rock-throwing community may not be the way to enjoy a contented life. Not so with glass dresses. In Boston they make them—and wear them!

Miss Priscilla Kelly of Watertown provides proof. For the gown she displayed at the Wholesale Garment Association's convention was neither silk, cotton nor wool. It was GLASS.

The fabric that draped comely Miss Kelly had none of the transparency of the window pane. And the knife-like edges usually found on broken bottles were nowhere in evidence. She seemed quite comfortable in her softly spun robe.

However—and this is not beyond possibility—our legislators may do something drastic about this new kind of dress. A few years ago they "shatter-proofed" our automobiles. Now they may think it necessary to do the same with our wives.

Lightning's Forty Targets

THE terrifying experience of forty members of the Addison Graves Family Association directs attention to lightning and its hazards.

The forty, attending their annual reunion at Ashfield, were severely burned when a bolt struck the tree under which they were sitting.

When an electrical storm is overhead, or in the vicinity, the principal thing for everybody to avoid is a tree.

Lightning has a peculiar habit of singling out the tallest object in the locality for its marksmanship. And the person who takes refuge under it often never lives to tell how it felt to be hit.

The person caught in a thunder storm is safer in an open field than in a forest or grove. In the field, he should lie flat on the ground. For there is always the danger that, should he stand, lightning might mistake him for a tree.

Praise for Cambridge

FORTY of the nation's larger cities accomplished the commendable feat of reducing traffic fatalities during the first six months of this year. One was Cambridge.

As a result, Mayor John D. Lynch, Police Chief Timothy F. Leahy and Captain John J. Canney receive a well-deserved citation from the American Automobile Association.

We congratulate them, the men who helped to make the good record possible, and the city they represent.

When one realizes that nearly a million persons have been killed in motor vehicle accidents in this country during the past fifteen years, he must admit that any reduction, no matter how small, is important.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Aug. 4 — Jay N. Darling, known to the world of cartooning as "Ding," is the only member of his craft to make good in New York, finds it distasteful and hikes back to the hills. He began his career on the Des Moines Tribune, to which he returned a number of years ago.

O. O. McIntyre

Ding, like Webster and Tad, suffered an affliction in his right arm that forced him to learn to draw with his left. There was a time when he drew an hilarious comic strip which was the talk of the syndication field. He has a highly developed sense of broad humor.

But he had a colossal aversion to the "pow" school of limning. He is the son of a preacher and a bit of preaching appealed to him—the sort of preaching that a front page cartoon can do. He is one of the cartoonists to express independence of thought.

He will attend editorial conferences and listen to suggestions but refuses to delineate any idea that does not accord with his own views, political or otherwise. Big cities depress him and he thinks Des Moines the ideal sized place in which to live.

Various observatory towers such as the Empire, Chrysler and Radio City have increased the vogue of advertising on roof tops tremendously. From these observatories one may see ads of department stores, proclaiming sales; hotels, announcing attractions in their grills, etc. One institution plans a large electric sign that will glow skyward solely for tower visitors and airplane passengers.

Nostalgia: I never visit crowded streets such as Delancey with sidewalks overrun with children that I do not think how much these tots must be missing. No tall sycamores grow there, no coyotes howl at night, no red squirrels scamper through fallen leaves, no woodpeckers tap out their afternoon music.

A copy reader with whom I once worked on Park Row told me sadly that being city born he had missed the thrills of boyhood he had read so much about in small towns. His most vivid childhood memory was of being asked by old women to chase to the corner for a bucket of beer.

So often men who occupy big desks in the dizziest spires are found great hands for fishing and the outdoors. At a casual glance they seem to express Harvard, rowing on the St. James, a post graduate at Oxford and the like. Yet in reminiscent moods you find they know intimately the woods and streams—the big mouthed catfish, the mallards that visit in the autumn, all the barnyard animals and fowls, how a horse's fetlock is constructed, how a cow's tail works, and such.

It is difficult to imagine such a man perfectly at home in a deep cushioned chair with his late afternoon Scotch and Schweeps at the Union Club. And I don't believe he is.

Marshall Neilan now and then goes on an eating binge. All of a sudden he acquires a yen for M. Frederick's version of the pressed duck at Tour d'Argent or for a chine of beef at Simpson's on the Strand, and off he goes. On a recent excursion he found the finest oysters at a little place called Constantine's in Mobile. And the best red snapper at the Columbia cafe in Tampa. The fellow that runs it made the blend and roasted all the coffee for Alfonso before Spain booted him.

Neilan found grand cooking, too, in St. Petersburg, Fla., especially mullets. They take the stalk of a palm, split it down the center forming a fork, then stick these forks in a circle around an old fashioned bonfire and let the mullets roast, after which they are dipped in drawn butter—oo, la la.

They were talking of high in similes. Until something better comes along my vote goes to Noel Coward in "Present Indicative" who similied: "Fears twittered in my stomach like birds in a paper bag."

Thingumbobs: Ben Hecht is among the last of the stogie smokers . . . Floyd Gibbons eats four meals a day, which include a hearty meal at midnight . . . Peggy Hoyt has a Pom she carries in a muff to neighborhood movies.

I have come to know—being one of the guild—that the fellow who has quit drinking becomes pretty much of a nuisance discussing alcohol.

Most of us carry around our soap boxes upon which to mount at the first opportunity, ready to make the average tippler feel cast to play lead in "The Face on The Barroom Floor."

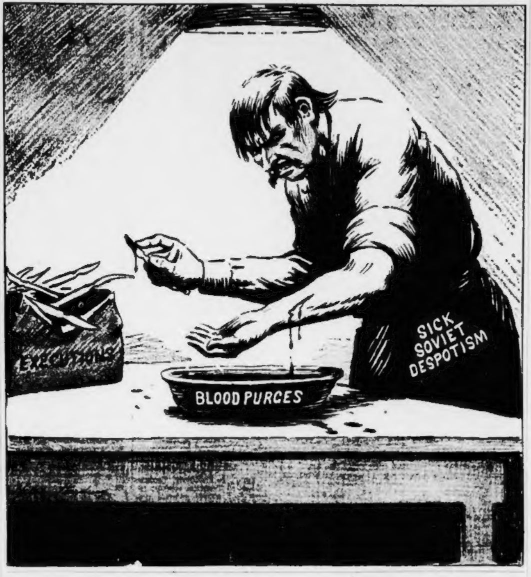
Bleeding the Patient

By Nelson Harding



Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

I've met lads who had tracked lions, rassled alligators, played tag with man-eating sharks and were Human Cannon Balls.

Elsie Robinson

But for sheer, reckless, self-liquidating audacity, I hereby nominate Mr. Paul Gallico.

For why? Turn to the July issue of COSMOPOLITAN and you'll know why. On page 152 — without even donning a nose guard —Mr. Gallico says—

"Lady athletes are wretched sports."

Then with the obvious intention of turning plain suicide into mass murder, he continues:

"Girls are not DELIBERATELY bad sports. They are simply women, and no woman ever plays fair in any kind of competition against another woman if she can help it, which she usually can.

(Lady, lady, how that lad is looking for trouble!)

"Women's competitive instincts are rooted deeper than man's . . . Women are psychologically unable to approach a contest of any kind from the same angle that men do. That it happens to be golf or tennis or squash makes no particular difference.

It is competition—and the girls are not geared to take it. With patience and training, you can teach some of them to lose with good grace, but you can never make them like it.

"The ladies bear grudges afterwards, have alibis, and make remarks."

Hard to take, isn't it, sisters? Yet I suspect it's true.

SHE ADMITS IT

Ever meet a lady politician? Ever have a lady guest? Ever have a woman down on you? 'Nuff said! Even Miss Clara Mortensen, champion woman wrestler of the world, admits she would rather wrestle with a man than a woman any time, "because men are better sports."

All this, says Mr. Gallico, is because women take things too personally . . . can't snap out of it and be a Regular Pal. He says:

"No man ever takes a game as seriously as a woman does. A man views his opponent with complete personal detachment; the latter represents a temporary problem and nothing more. Once (the game) is over he forgets it, and the man against whom he has played is no longer an opponent but simply another person.

"It is only an exceptional woman athlete who is able to be so impersonal about someone against whom she has played."

All of which seems a mighty tough indictment. But how come?

Why should the bewitching charmer in the diving suit on the Sports Page become such a hellion when she hits the bubbles?

Why should she regard team work as not only unnecessary and distasteful, but as a downright affront to her fundamental rights?

When it comes to courage and endurance, woman has—Mr. Gallico admits—any man backed off the boards.

Then is she just naturally cussed . . . selfish, unreliable and vain?

THE REAL CAUSE

Sometimes—maybe. But according to the late Mr. Rudyard Kipling, there's a deeper cause for woman's poor team work. Women have been despots from the start—matriarchs by necessity. For Woman is the creator, the preserver of life.

As such, her will must be steel, her word must be law . . . she cannot afford to quibble or compromise or surrender as a man may do.

"The female of the species MUST be deadlier than the male!"

A million years, at least, from Bessie Bearclaws, crouching in her cave, to Minnie the Mermaid, diving from her board. Yet the old tribal law still holds, and "the female of the species" is still life's bravest adventurer—but the gaming crew's worst sport.

So the next time Mamie spikes your chin in the skirmish—that's why. OR IS IT?

Marry —Go— Round

By Helen Rowland

Mistaking a Lothario for a Lochinvar is the fatal error by which nearly every woman breaks her own heart at least once.

Whenever a masculine fool is born there are at least a dozen feminine fools sent into the world to make an egotist of him.

Vanity is a woman's Nemesis. It makes a young girl foolish, a middle-aged woman unhappy, and an old woman ridiculous.

If you think that the most acute form of boredom is being married to someone you don't love, try being married to a man who doesn't love YOU.

These are the glamorous days and moon-mad nights when every man imagines that he is in love with some girl, more or less. Usually, less and less—and less.

That far-away, complacent smile on a man's face may mean that he is thinking something flattering about you; but it more often means that he has just thought of something flattering about himself.

Nearly every woman goes into marriage with the secret conviction that a man needs to be "mothered." And nearly every man goes to the altar with the firm belief that a woman needs to be "dominated." And that's where the trouble begins!

If a man would only use his head when he proposes marriage to a girl instead of waiting until he LOSES it, he would save himself many a bitter regret and avoid the sad necessity later on of having to choose between misery and alimony.

Add an air of tender solicitude to the masterful manner of a strong, dominant he-man, and you have a combination that no woman on earth can resist.

A "Buddha" Is Chosen

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Through the portals of the great temple at Lhasa, where the tranquil Buddhas sit with folded hands, go a mother and her man-child. On the throne sits the priest-emperor of all Tibet — the Panchen Lama, ruler supreme until another living Buddha, another Dalai Lama, makes himself known by some mystic sign.

Edward C. Hill

Before the golden throne, the mother, with her babe in arms—it's only a bit of a thing, nine months old—pause in adoration. The old Lama leans forward in a gesture of benediction, and, of a sudden, the baby's hands thrust out, seize the holy beads around the Lama's neck, cling to them and refuse to give them up. All over the temple there is a stir, a rising tumult. Shaven priests appear like magic from unsuspected retreats. Some rush forward to seize the child and draw the sacred beads from its impious hands.

So they will take that child and its mother very soon, and, unless a more powerful sign is given, the baby of nine months will become the 14th Dalai Lama, supreme over the souls as well as the bodies of three million men, women and children who dwell on top of the world, in a land one-third the size of the United States, with a population half that of New York, among the highest of earth's mountains and where weird things do take place.

STRANGE TALES TOLD

Sir Charles Bell, former British resident at Tibet's capital, Lhasa, has himself told me of seeing holy men levitate themselves into the air and lie, stretched out five feet above the ground, with nothing at all to support them but thin air. He has told strange tales of the fakirs who, from a sitting posture, can spring ten feet in the air. And of a visit to the Grand Lama, when he saw a dead man—he could have sworn the man had been dead for weeks—arise from his coffin, walk steadily to the Grand Lama's throne, prostrate himself humbly, slowly arise, stagger back to his coffin and retire again to the cold silence of death.

A strange land. Nestling on the roof of the world, Tibet, the mysterious Land of Lamas, is hemmed in by the cloud-tipping peaks of the Himalaya Mountains between India and China. For centuries, Tibetans have been ruled by a supreme temporal head, the Dalai Lama. Being devout Buddhists, they believe their priest-emperor never dies, but that his soul, or ego, merely transfers itself into the body of a new-born child immediately upon his physical death.

Three years ago, their 13th Dalai Lama departed this life and climbed another stage toward Nirvana. Unhappily, he failed to conjure up a likeness of his successor in the sacred lake east of Lhasa, the Forbidden City. Ever since then the priests have been searching for the Living Buddha—some very young child who might reveal himself as divine by a mystic sign.

NONE LIKE IT

No country in the world chooses its ruler so strangely. We are accustomed to kings succeeding by "divine right" and to presidents chosen by the "will of the people." But old Asia is the cradle of the world religions, and here, in the heart of Asia, it is religion that governs the choice of each Dalai Lama, the sovereign of Tibet.

He does not succeed as a king succeeds, for a Dalai Lama lives apart from all women. He is not chosen. No votes are cast. He manifests himself, and it is for his people to recognize him.

Tibetans, like Hindus, believe in the rebirth of human beings and animals. When a Dalai Lama passes out of this life, his spirit enters the body of a boy about to be born. That boy is the new Dalai Lama, or, rather, the same Dalai returned to earth again.

He need not have returned, for he has obtained Buddahood. He is no longer on the Wheel of Life. He is freed from the miseries of worldly existence. But he waives his privilege and comes back to help a suffering world on the upward path. So it may be that this infant son of a humble peasant woman will become priest-emperor of Tibet—a person of vast consequence to Russia, Japan, China and Great Britain, the powers that eternally scheme and struggle for domination of Asia.

He may come to reign in the Great Monastery, 1200 years old and 11,000 feet above the hot plains of India, far to the South. A place to grip the imagination—of the earth, yet not of it.

On the Nail

By Benjamin DeCasseres

Formal declarations of war have gone out of fashion. One nation now springs at another nation's throat overnight.

China and Japan are plainly engaged in a life-and-death struggle, but neither country admits that a "war" is going on.

The object of this new technique is three-fold.

In the first place, if two nations have an unsolvable dispute one of them must declare war before the other. In that case the first one to declare war will be held the guilty party by the neutral nations. This may cause "sanctions" to be laid against her.

In the second place, war without a formal declaration of war delays other nations from applying their neutrality acts.

In the third place, this sidestepping preserves the "sanctity" of peace-pacts—like the Kellogg nine-power agreement, for instance—and thus "saves the faces" of the warring powers.

All of which must be highly amusing to the shades of Alexander, Julius Caesar and Napoleon, who knew nothing of the arts of modern international hypocrisy.

On a March morning in 1936 a slight erosion of the soil on the East Texas farm of George Patton revealed the skeletons of four persons.

On Thanksgiving Day in 1932 four tenants on his farm, a husband, a wife and their two children, disappeared. But, as wandering tenant farmers were quite usual in that region, it was hardly noted.

So, when the bones were uncovered by "an act of nature," THE BONES BEGAN TO TALK. They said very plainly, "PATTON!"

That "somebody back up the line" that "got" Patton was just four years of soil erosion going on under his unseeing eyes.

If your radio gives off more static than usual these days you must blame it on an interference 92,000,000 miles away.

The sun is having one of its periodical outbreaks of black hives, called "sun-spots." And this time these spots are among the largest ever witnessed.

The present group is 125,000 miles long and covers 3,800,000,000 square miles. As the sun is 332,000 times bigger than the earth, these Titanic spots bother old Sol no more than a roving flea on the back of an elephant.

BUT if one of those sun-spots should ever explode—well, that would be of considerably greater importance to us than just static on our radios!

Maybe you are BOTH. For "luck" may be a form of SUB-CONSCIOUS INTELLIGENCE. That is, you may know MORE than you think you know—you may have a "hunch." And intelligence may be a form of "luck." That is to say, you were "lucky" enough to be born of people who had sensitive nerves, nimble brains and imaginations that could take mental pole-vaults.

Tyler Dennett, lately retired as president of Williams College, has the following highly original ideas on this odd question:

"Good luck comprises a correct attitude toward an event which for another may be bad luck because of a wrong attitude. There is a tide in the affairs of men which, taken at its flood, is good or bad, dependent not upon blind fate, but rather upon the intelligence which perceives when the tide is at its flood."

I have said many times in my life, "Curse my luck!" when I should have said, "Curse my stupidity!"

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

A high executive of one of the big railroad systems says the train limit bill, recently passed by the Senate, will, if it becomes law, "bankrupt every railroad in the United States." Surely, Congress doesn't want to do that. Anything that ruins the railroads will be a staggering blow to the whole country.

This train limit bill would restrict the length of freight trains to 70 cars. There is no reason for such an arbitrary limitation. The excuse is that it will make railroading safer. But the real purpose is to force railroads to employ more train crews than are needed. Where they are going to get the money to do this is ignored by advocates of the bill.

The safety argument, as a justification for the arbitrary limitation of the size of railroad trains, will not hold water. No one is more interested than the railroads themselves in making their trains safe. No transportation agency has been more successful in reducing accidents. The "Safety First" campaign which the railroads have been carrying on for years has made them the safest of all transportation agencies, not only for the public but for their employes.

According to the National Safety Council, the total number of railroad employes killed on steam lines last year was 824. The total number of passengers killed on their trains was only 23. In that same period, 38,500 PEOPLE WERE KILLED IN ACCIDENTS IN HOMES. MORE THAN TWELVE TIMES AS MANY PEOPLE ARE ACCIDENTALLY KILLED IN THE BEDROOMS OF THEIR HOMES AS ARE KILLED IN ACCIDENTS ON RAILROADS.

The Treasury Department reports that the American people are smoking more cigarettes than ever before. The cigarette production for the first six months of 1937 set a new high record of 78,094,812,102—an average of more than three a day for every person in the United States. How times have changed! A little over 30 years ago, a nation-wide campaign against cigarettes was in progress. Anti-cigarette leagues were organized all over the country. Children were being told there was no more injurious habit they could contract. Nobody believes that foolishness now.

The World War, more than anything else, made cigarette smoking popular and spread the habit. Soldiers in training camps found cigarettes ideal for the short smoke during the brief rest periods between drills. The habit spread and as women took up the cigarette vogue the crusade against it became as dead as the proverbial "door nail." Smoking evils have been so over-exaggerated any mention of them is a waste of time and breath and effort.

The minimum wage and maximum hours bill now before Congress is a good example of cutting loopholes in a new law. The backers of this measure agree that, "in principle," a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour and a maximum working week of 40 hours is desirable. But the first thing they discover is that it would not be politically expedient to apply these wage and hours standards to everybody.

There are the farmers, for example. Not even a New Deal Congress could put them on a 40-hour week basis or make them pay a minimum wage of 40 cents an hour, for they simply couldn't do it.

Two Frenchmen who are alleged to have confessed that they carried tubes of typhoid and sleeping sickness microbes which were to be used to start epidemics behind the rebel lines were sentenced to death by a Spanish rebel court-martial. Spreading disease among non-combatants, as well as soldiers, is a frightful way of waging war. But there are no rules or human considerations in war.
